BACON GROWS MORE URBANK.

But the Men of Og'ethorpe Have Made Up Their Minds.

LEXINGTON, Ga., May 20 .- [Special.] -- As demonstrative as was Major Bacon's following in Augusta last night, equally as enthusiastic was General Gordon's reception today at the hands of the people of Oglethorpe county. There was no rowdyism nor boisterousness. but everybody seemed in a good humor and evinced a determination of hearing the discussion on its merits, extending to each speaker the full privilege of saying what he pleased. Oglethorpe has been considered a strong Bacon county. Less than a week ago the friends of General Gordon counted it as one of those which would be solid for Bacon. The general himself considered it doubtful, believing that the organization which his opponent had succeeded in effecting among his friends in the county would carry it against him. Prominent citizens told me today that a week ago no one doubted but that the county would choose Bacon delegates. Thus it is that General Gordon's warm reception today was something of a surprise. It gave evidence of the crystalization of his friends into a compact and earnest body, whose enthusiasm would certainly go far toward taking the county out of the doubtful column. Not only this, but an hour's stay in the town showe that the situation was brighter still. The Gordon men claimed positively that they would carry the county. His room at the Roan house was crowded with earnest friends, and all were positive that there was no further cause for doubt.

DEMONSTRATIONS ON THE WAY. General Gordon had been particularly well pleased with the reception, which he had met all along the route, and the assurances of sup-port in the counties through which he passed on his way from Augusta. At Norwood, in Warcounty, a large crowd met the train and led loudly for Gordon. He shook hands th those that could meet him before the started, and among the number recogded several old soldiers, who greeted him armly, and assured him of their support and eir belief that he would carry the county. here was no Bacon demonstration at this top. At Barnett both candidates were called or, and stopped for a minute on the platform of the depot, renewing old acquaintances, and making new ones. At Crawfordsville a large crowd had gathered. On one side of the depot the Gordon men had assembled, bearing a banner on which was inscribed:

"FOR GOVERNOR, JOHN B. GORDON." A car-length further up a similar banner crowd of about one-fourth as large numerically as the other. As the train stopped each assemblage called for the man of its choice. As General Gordon stepped from the platform of the car a great cheer went up from those who swaited him. They rushed around him in the most enthusiastic manner, cheering all the time. Major Bacon's friends were fewe and less enthusiastic, but it is justice to both to say that each crowd claimed Taliaferro In Woodville and Antioch, in Oglethorpe counyt, Gordon had 1 things is own way, and at both places he stepped or the platform amidst the greatest enthusiasm. By the time that he reached Lexington he felt pretty well assured that instead of being in one of his opponent's strongholds, he was

The speaking took place in front of the square on which is being erected the new courthouse. All parts of the county were well represented, and a large number were present from neighboring counties. Particularly large was the delegation from Athens who had not only been attracted by the interest which the occasion promised, but had come to hear something of the Clarke county meth od, which has become quite an issue in the contest during the week. The delegation numbered about thirty.

THE DISCUSSION BEGINS. Major Bacon was introduced by State Senafor James M. Smith, whose reference to his service to the state during the atomy time of reconstruction was greeted with applause. He announced that it had been agreed that the first speaker would be allowed one hour to open and fifteen minutes to close, and that the other would speak an hour and fifteen min-

Major Racon's voice has not stood the ordea to which it has been subjected during the week, and was even worse today from the fact that the meeting was an ont-door one. His first reference to any of the issues which had been made was the Clarke county meeting, which he defended, as in his Augusta speech. He further stated that he had learned that since them an investigation as to the stand of the city of them had been made from among the of Athens had been made, from among the business men seen he could carry the county as largely as his friend General Gordon ned it. He again explained his attitude as to primaries. Just here a new feature of the campaign was Introduced, and it was received with general surprise by the audience, who expected a repe-tition of the acrimony which had characterized the discussion in the other places, at which the two had spoken this week. But it seems as if the policy of the two candidates has been changed as to the personal issues which each made against the other. Consequently it was somewhat surprising when Major Bacon, anticipating some of the charges which his honorable opponent would bring against him, alluded in a most affable manner to the hot time which his opponent had in store for him. "He will say," said he, "some pretty hard things about me, I know. The general has gone for me pretty heavily concerning certain matters, and I have nothing to do but to take it." This was said so pleasantly as to cause a ripple of laughter from the audience. "But," said he, "I may have some hard things to say myself. I will make no charges, but will lay the facts before the people, and let them decide." The senato-rial resignation was then fully discussed as in former speeches. As to the charge of his own re-signation of the adjutancy of the Ninth Georgia regiment, he had only to say what he had formerly said, of his sickness and consequent justification of the course he pursued, and re peated that the charge against him was an un-true one. He then proceeded to the discus-sion of the business failures of his opponent, to which he devoted the remainder of his argument, concluding with applause.

GENERAL GORDON PRESENTED. General Gordon was introduced by Colone J. T. Olive, a prominent candidate for the legislature from Oglethorpe. His allusion to his qualities as a statesman and his record as a soldier met with cheers, and his presentation of "Successful John B. Gordon, a man who like Washington of old, was first in war, first in peace and first in the hearts of his fellow countrymen,' met with vociferous applause, and cries for Gordon were heard from hundreds of throats. As quiet was being restored, a voice cried "That ain't no Athens holler!"

REPLYING TO BACON, General Gordon said he did not know how to thank the gentleman for his kind introduction, except it be by inviting him to dinner with him in the executive mansion when he was governor and his friend was a member of the legislature from Oglethorpe, [Laughter and applause.] He then referred to the Clarke county meeting, reviewing it in a good natured way and creating considerable laugh-ter by his apt allusions and anecdotes. Athens, he said, was always a good place, and he had always loved it, but he ought; to love it more now than ever. It has come to his assistance at a time when he was glad to have its support. The Clarke county fellows were all good fellows, and they are hard workers, but, like the leader they were following, they had begun too soon. They had not only fixed things in Clarke for their candidate, but they were here now to help you carry your county. [Great cheers and laughter.] He made a number of pleasant thrusts at the Clarke county method, and the Athens delegation, from whom he said Bacon had gotten nearly all his comfort today. He then referred to the question of primaries, in much the same argument as he used before.

A voice—"How about Lee ?" General Gordan-Well, you want to know about Lee. I'll tell you. There was not but two Gordon men in the county when I was first announced. It was a Bacon stronghold, and that's why it was called so early, but I stormed his fort, and, instead of being a Bacon county, I get it by a vote of nearly two to one. [Applause.] He thanked the people of Oglethorpe for their welcome. "My friend Smith," he remarked, pointing to Senator Smith, "will be in the minority in his county. It will go overwhelmingly for me. Let's test it. All of those here who are for me will hold

Up went the hands of three-fourths of the voters present.

"Now you see," said the general. "Subtract from that the Athens crowd, and how many will you have left?" Continuing, he said that his friend Bacon said that he resigned his place in the senate. Yes, I did, but I quit a very comfortable place, din't I. But my friend resigned a place of trust to get a more comfortable one, but he says he was sick. I expect he was. I was a nice place to make a man sick. I will not impugn my friend's loyalty in doing what he did, for somebody had to collect the eggs and the grain and the meat and the cattle and why not he as well as anyone? [Laughter.] It was such a good position to get fat and make money to run for governor. [Laughter. To have staid there might have spoiled his good looks, and again it might have placed him in a condition which would have cut off his gubernatorial aspirations. [Great laughter

He then spoke of his own resignation, and answered the charges of his business failures to what seemed to be the perfect satisfaction of his hearers, who frequently interrupted him with applause. He alluded to the fact that his friend Bacon used to get mad when he referred to his resignation, and he is getting used to it now. He could have probably got-ten used to hard tack and onions if he had tried long enough. I suppose he thinks I am the strangest man on earth. My opponent is mad because I resigned my office, when he has been trying to get in office ever since the war. Continuing, he said: "I have served my state as faithfully and as best I could. I have worked for it day and night, and every throb of my heart and devotion of my energy has been for it." In speaking of the absurd talk about using Mr. Davis to boom himself for governor, he ridiculed unmercifully the people who indulged in such peurile stuff, and paid this splendid

TRIBUTE TO MR. HILL. He said: "Major Bacon, my friend, did you ever hear of Benj. H. Hili? Do you know of the estimation in which he was held by Jeffer son Davis? Do you know that Jefferson Davis regarded this great Georgian as the most po-tential power that sustained his administra-tion in the confederate congress in the dark hours of the confederacy? Was it any wondor, then, that Jefferson Davis, the grandest martyr of modern times, should honor by his presence the unveiling of the monument of his friend, and one of the great-est orators of modern times. [Loud cheering.] Him, whose voice, speaking through his Notes on the Situation, like the voice of the great Roman, first aroused his conquered country men and led them not to despair of the repub lie. [Loud cheers.] Him, whose clarion voice, sounding through the land, brought hope to our hearts while yet in his own element would be a supply to the land. quent words we stood neck deep in ashes. [Prolonged cheers.] Him who, in the house of representatives at Washington, silenced the minions of radical hate who would have hounded our great chieftian to his grave."

At the conclusion of General Gordon's address the audience became wildly enthusiastic, and applanded and hurrahed to the echo. Two magnificent floral offerings were sent the speaker. As he arose to acknowledge them there was a renewal of the enthusiasm, which continued several seconds. It was evident that Gordon had captured the crowd, and that his speech had gone to the bearts of his bearers.

BACON'S SECOND CHANCE.

Major Bacon concluded his fifteen minutes with reference to his position on questions of which he had spoken before, and on which his stand is well known. He spoke of General Gordon's power, and the speech in which his opponent claimed that he had done so much for the veterans who were in need of help just after the war, as who could not get federal positions nor assistance. He taunted him with supporting young Pat Calhoun for district attorney in preference to W. E. Simmons or George N Lester, claiming that there was an opportunity of helping old soldiers which was not improved. After making a vigorous attack on the Atlanta ring, and showing its "vicious" tendencies, he concluded, was applauded and received a pretty bouquet.

THE EFFECT OF GORDON'S SPEECH.

There is no doubt that the effect of General Gordon's speech was felt long before its conclusion. It was the general comment of the town that General Gordon had appeared to much greater advantage, and if there was any doubt before among his supporters that he would carry the county, it was dissipated before night. They are all enthusiastic and claim a certain victory, in which opinion I most assuredly join, after talking to voters from every part of the county. Fairness prompts me to add, however, that Mr. Bacon's friends also claim to be as confident.

IT IS HISTORIC GROUND.

An enthusiastic citizen, whose mind was running back to 1868, said: "The spot on which the speaking took place today is historic. There spoke, in 1868, the year when our grand old state was wallowing in the mire of radicalism, the gallant Gordon, who stood before the sea of up-turned faces today who was the candidate for governor against Bullock. Then it was, that Hill, Toombs and Howell Cobb, the great triumvirate, spoke in the order named for the gallant "Gordon' who had espoused the cause of right and to wrest from the clutches of carpetbagism, the grand old commonwealth. These three giants spoke as never man spoke. Hill opened in an hour or more, electrifying that vast assemblage with his elequent tongue, followed by Toombs, whose eloquence like an avalanche rolled from his magic lips in matchless power. When he had finished there was great sympathy for Cobb, every one thinking he could not say anything that had not been said. But they soon found that they had underrated the man. You can see men today who can repeat almost his every word. In mute silence did they stand in that vast throng, an hour and a half, with bosoms heaving with patriotic emotions as Howell Cobb swayed their minds to and fro, causing out-bursts of applause. He turned to the colored men, and spoke to them, told them that the white man was their best friend, the white man must rule this country, and the white man will ever rule it. We all remember that the gallant Gordon was overpowered at the ballot box. A man living here in this county today will tell you he threw out 275 votes against Gordon. It was when the colored was seans teorion. It was when the colored man voted three days here, when corruption and misrule ran high. The very men who live here now, and endeavored to uphold the right during those dark days are firm supporters of General Gordon. He is before us today. Shall we not re-seat him in the chair, to which he was justly elected?" C. H.

PROGRESS OF THE CAMPAIGN.

A writer from Mitchell county says that while that county was strongly for Bacon two weeks ago, it is now debatable territory, the old soldiers flocking to 'Gordon's standard. One man who lives several miles in the country from Ca milla, says if necessary he would crawl all the way to town to vote for Gordon. Another says he would if necessary walk to Augusta to cast his vote for him, and so it goes. A correspondent writing from Albany, says, "Dougherty county is more unanimous for Gordon than I ever remember to have seen it for any can didate outside of its own limits."

Mr. L. F. Blalock writes from Fayettesville that he does not know of more than a half dozen Bacon men in Fayette county and that it is solid for

Hon. R. H. Baker, of Lumpkin, is in the city. He says that if the people of his section get a chance at the ballot box that Gordon will sweep every county. Mr. Bacon says, "I was for Sim-mons when he was in the race. When he came mons when he was in the race. When he came out I was for Gordon. I could not get my consent to vote against him. If the people get out to vote he will not lose a delegate in my section."

The Bacon men of Wilkinson county say that if they had a primary election here and General Gordon spoke before the people of the county, the result would be the same as it was in Lee, hence they are fighting primaries.

That Floyd will be solid for Gordon is evidenced by the following:

they are fighting primaries.

That Floyd will be solid for Gordon is evidenced by the following:

With a view to determine the relative strength of General Gordon and Major Bacon in the gnbernatorial contest in Floyd county, and also for the purpose of calling a mass meeting for organization in the interest of General Gordon, the writer, with properly prepared petition partially canvassed the city of Rome for a couple of hours. He did not know the sentiments of the gentlemen approached on this question. The result of the two hours' canvass was overwhelming in favor of General Gordon. During the canvass he secured the signatures of seventy-five representative men of all trades and callings, and found only five men against Gordon and in favor of Bacon. This is in the proportion of fifteen for Gordon to one for Bacon. The result thus obtained shows that Rome is overwhelmingly for General Gordon. It is but reasonable to conclude that this ratio will be maintained in the outside county districts. He has talked to a number of representative citizens from the county, and they were without exception for General Gordon. It has been stated repeatedly that this section was strong for Bacon. But instead of that the truth is that it is dominated by a regular Gordon tornado! The people are controlled and led on by a regular red-hot Gordon enthusiasm. They are going to follow him, as did the grand old veterans in the fierce conflicts of battle.

Mr. M. I. Atkins, of the old 51st Georgia, Cuthbert, Ga., writes that a Gordon club was organized on three hours' notice, and over a hundred names enrolled. He adds that the ladies are solld for Gordon, and that this is two thirds of the battle, and that the wives of many Bacon men are for Gordon, which insures their ultimate conversion.

Colonel H. F. Carswell is spoken of as a suitable man for state senater from his district, it being Wilkinson's turn next. Hou John W. Lindsey will be a candidate for re-election to the house from Wilkinson.

Forsyth county will have her democratic mass meeting to select delegates to the gubernatorial and congressional conventions on the first Tuesday in June.

Dr. V. D. Lockhart, of Banks county, has resigned the chairmanship of the democratic executive committee, and P. M. Edwards has been appointed to fill the vacancy. There will be quite a number of candidates before the convention of Banks county for the nomination of state senator and representative.

Give the democrats of the state a fair chance at the ballot box! the ballot box!

Even the people of Macon are getting tired of the abuse of General Gordon. A prominent citizen, who is willing that Major Bacon should have his name, if desired, says:

General Gordon is gaining friends here every day, and I houestly believe if he could come here.

READY FOR BUSINESS.

The roll having been called, the chairman an-nounced that the committee was duly organized and ready for business.

Mr. Peeples introduced the following resolutions

Mr. Peeples introduced the following resolutions:
Resolved, 1. That a convention of the democratic party of Georgia be called to convene in the hall of the house of representatives, in the capitol of the state, at —, on Wednesday, the — day of — next, to nominate a candidate for governor and candidates for attorney-general, comptroller-general, treasurer and secretary of state.
Resolved, 2. That each county be entitled to twice the number of votes in said convention that it is now entitled to in the house of representatives of the general assembly of the state.
Resolved, 3. That in accordance with the established usage of the democratic party, that the time and manner of selecting delegates to the convention, and the number of delegates the counties may send to cast the vote to which they are entitled, be left to the people of each county to determine for themselves. Resolved, 4. That the executive committee of each county is earnestly requested to adopt such methods, satisfactory to itself, as will ensure a full, free and fair expression of the popular choice in selecting delegates to state, district and senatorial conventions.
Resolved, 5. That in order to secure bong fide conventions.

Resolved, 5, That in order to secure bona fide representation upon which the party must depend for a true expression of its preference in nominating conventions, that each county be requested to select alternates to take the place of regularly appointed delegates who fall to attend; and we recommend that no person shall be eligible to a seat in the convention who is not an actual citizen of in the convention who is not an actual the county he offers to represent.

On motion of Mr. Charlton, the resolutions were acted upon separately. SPEECHES IN ORDER.

The chairman suggested that the business first in order was to fill the blanks in the first resolu-

Mr. Guerry moved that the bla: be filled by inserting "12 o'clock, noon, on Wed day, the 11th day of August." The motion was sended.

Mr. Sweat obtained the floor sud said that he favored giving the several candidates all the time necessary in the campaign, but he did not think it should be extended beyond a reasonable length.
Mr. Daniel interrupted Mr. Sweat. He declared that there was no precedent for holding the convention in the capital city, and moved to substitute Augusta, Mr. Dismuke arose to a point of order. He understood that the question was upon filling the blanks in the first resolution.

The chairman sustained the point.

Mr. Sweat, who had remained standing, contin ued his remarks. "I am not in favor," he said,
"of calling the convention to meet too early. I am in favor of giving the several candidates reasonable time to canvass the state. But, without re gard to the candidates. I believe the committee gard to the dathbases, in better that committees as representing every interest of the state, ought to fix as early a date as it reasonably can. I don't believe that there is a single issue in the canvass with which the people are unacquainted. Gordon, Bacon and Jones are well known to the people, Mr. W. A. Harris.—"My candidate is well known, Mr. Sweat.-"Yes, yours too. A heated contest is upon us. It will grow hotter. I am for preserving the peace of the state and the good of the party without regard to candidates. I believe the good of the party demands that the contest should PRECEDENTS AND PRECEDENTS.

PRECEDENTS AND PRECEDENTS.
Continuing, Mr. Sweat said: "As to precedents, the last two or three conventions were held in August; but further back, they were held in July. The committee has the right to establish precedents, if it pleases."

Mr. Sweat—"I am presenting my views to the committee without being influenced in favor of any candidate. [Laughter.] I move that the blanks be filled by inserting: '12 o'clock on Wednesday, the 14th day of July.' " Mr. Walsh—"The convention of 1882 was held on

Mr. Walsh—"The convention of 1882 was held on the 19th of July."

Mr. Sweat's motion was seconded.

Mr. Guerry obtained the floor. "I agree with the gentleman," he said, "in what we do we ought certainly to have no reference to the effect upon the interests of the several candidates. But I disagree as to the candidates' having sufficient time in the period he proposes to discuss the issues of the campaign. The contest is heated. I hope it will not become hotter, because if it does it will be hottest just at the time proposed by the gentleman for holding the convention. Let us wait until August and give candidates and delegates time to cool off. Under the circumstances it would be unwise in the committee to depart from the well established customs of the last four conventions: 1876, August 2; 1880, August 4; 1882, July 19; 1884, August 13. It appears that August was three times selected. I hope the motion of the gentleman will not prevail.

Mr. Thomas: "Mr. Chairman, while the republicans and the independents still linger in Georgia, we should not be too hurried. in our action. We should take ample time to place our nominees before the people, so that if the republicans or the fore the people, so that if the republicans or the independents should put up a candidate we can put up a stronger one."

COMPROMISE MEASURES.

Mr. Thomas dwelf forcibly and at length upon the propositions enunciated by hint. Continuing, he said: "Let us have pienty of time. Let the records of the candidates become thoroughly known. Who is afraid of his record? Who is afraid of the party's record? Let a white light be shed upon all records."

Mr. Smith—"Mr. Chairman, as a compromise measure, I move that the blanks be filled by inserting the following words: 12 o'clock on Wednesday, the 4th day of August."

"I wish to make one suggestion

"I wish to make one suggestion In this matter, the people as well as the politicians should be consulted. If the recent events in my county (Putnam) are a sample of what is to occur county (Putnam) are a sample of what is to occur in the future, the sooner the convention is held the better. Bad feeling was engendered in my county that will last a lifetime. For the peace of the state, I hope the people will not be harrassed by an extended campaign."

Mr. Charlton obtained the floor. He spoke rapidly and vehemently. "I think," he said, "that all that is necessary has been stated, but there ought to be expressions of opinion from all quarters of the state. I arrese with the gentleman who ought to be expressions of opinion from all quarters of the state. I agree with the gentleman who has just taken his seat, especially as no candidate without a record could be put upon the people. I voice the people of my section when I say that I am opposed to an extended campaign. My people make up 'their minds in two or three days. The excitement with ithem begins on the morning of the convention, and is seen over. The people of the convention, and is soon over. The people of the state can determine in a month's time whom they want. Let us get rid of polities. It will be better for the people."

Mr. R. R. Harris said that he ignored all personal feeling, and wanted to stand by the precedent of the party without regard to candidates. A LIVELY TILT.

Mr. Sweat rose to a point of order A motion to fill the blanks with August 11 had been made, and he had offered as a substitute that the words, "Wednesday 14th day of July," be used,

That was as far as the motions could go.

The chairman ruled that where blanks were to be filled, any number of motions could be made Mr. Dismuke—"I agree with Mr. Humber. The reason, however, why I favor August is because it is a leisure month with the farmers. It will be inconvenient for them to attend the convention at any other time,"

Mr. Sweat—"Don't you think to prolong the can-vass until August 14 will be more injurious to the farmers than to hold the convention in July?" Mr. Dismuke-"I will answer that question from my observation. The farmers in my part of the state are not disturbed. [Applause. They are at work. I can't see that this campaign is more heated than others have been."

A voice-"Where are your specs?" Mr. Dismuke did not hear the query. Continuing, he said: "I don't know that the committee has anything to do with the campaign, heated or mot." [Applause.]

Mr. Guerry—"Wouldn't it do the farmers more good than harm to give them a showing?" [Applause.]

Mr. W. A. Harris-"The farmers can't tell any thing about the campaign from the newspapera."
[Great laughter.]
Mr. Dismuke—"I want the candidates to go into every county." [Applause.]

Mr. W. A. Harris—"You are right. I want 'em all at Isabella." [Laughter and applause.]
Mr. Dismuke—"I want the people to understand the issues." MORE LIVELINESS

Mr. W. A. Harris—"I agree with you. I have a candidate myself. [Laughter.] He's well known, too. [Great laughter.] But there are three other candidates before the people. I plck up The Con-STITUTION and I am overwhelmed. [Laughter.] That paper makes me think Gordon the greatest man in the world. [Applause.] I pick up the Au gusta Chronicle and the Macon Telegraph and I'm overwhelmed again. [Laughter.] I find state-ments that make a moral man believe that Gordon ought to be in the chain gang. [Great laughter.]
Mr. Walsh, rising hurriedly: "You do the Chronicle an injustice, sir. That paper has not abused Fordon. He is my personal friend, and I have as much respect for him as any man." [Applause.]

Mr. W. A. Harris-"Then I take it all back."
Laughter and applause.]
Mr. Walsh-"I have great respect for Gordon."
Mr. W. A. Harris-"So have I, and for Bacon, and for Jones. But I want time given to the can-didates to meet the people. There will be no row in my county. They will be treated well there. I believe that Gordon and Bacon have no personal differences, anyhow. I believe they would lie down and sleep together." [Laughter and applause.]

Mr. Jones—"It is useless to deny that the people are disturbed by the heated contest now in prog ress. I believe they want it stopped. It is inter-fering with business. But if it takes the people two or three mouths to make up their minds, why, give it to them,"

Mr. McArthur—"My friends from Clinch and others that are all solid.

THE QUESTION DECIDED.

Mr. Sweat—"Mr. Guerry intimates that my motion would precipitate the convention. I disclaim any such intention, and my motion would not have such an effect. If I had placed the date in June, the implied charge would be true."

Mr. Whitfield, who had remained a silent spectator.—"There is one matter to which I desire to call attention. If the people are to select delegates to the convention, then they should have ample Even the county executive committee must not be hurried."

Mr. Jones—"I propose another compromise, I move that the blank be filled by inserting: 12 clock on Wednesday, the 28th day of July.

The motion was seconded.

The Chairman—"According to parliamentary The Chairman—"According to parametery usage, I will put the question thus: First, August 11; second, August 4; fhfrd, July 28; fourth, July 14. The question is, shall the blanks be filled by inserting: '12 o'clock on Wednesday 11th day of August.' As many as are in favor of the motion will say yea; as many as are opposed, nay."

The vote resulted 8 in favor and 12 against.
Some confusion arose over voting the proxies, and so the yeas and nays were ordered. The result

Was as 10:10Ws:

Walsh refused to vote.
The motion was declared lost.
Mr. Sweat withdrew his motion to fill the blanks

W. A. Harris moved that the 28th day of July be accepted as a compromise. The motion was seconded, and the yeas and nays was ordered. The result was: Yeas, 21; nays, 2; Candler and Dismnke voting in he negative.

The motion was declared carried.

Mr. Daniel moved that in the first resolution the Mr. Daniel moved that in the first resolution the words. "in the capitol of the state" be stricken out and the word "Angusts" substituted.

The motion was seconded.

By 1; quest of Mr. Daniel, the secretary read inviations for the convention to meet in Augusta, sent to the committee by the democratic executive committee of Richmond county and the city council of Augusta.

Mr. Daniel then said: "I can see no reason why Mr. Daniel then said. I can see to reason why the convention should be held in Atlanta. We have no axes to grind in Augusta, no 'dark horses,'
Our people are free from all alliances. The facilities for reaching Augusta are good, and the railroads will offer low rates. I hope you will favor roads will offer low rates. I hope you will favor Augusta by giving her the convention."

The chairman suggested that Mr. Daniel reduce his motion to writing.

Mr. Waish—"If I may be permitted to supplement what Mr. Daniel has said, I beg to assure you that the people of Augusta will feel honored and that they will be delighted to have the convention. I know no objection, except that Augusta is on the eastern border of the state. But Augusta is as much a part of the state at if it were stuated at Eatonton or Miliedgevilled Mr. Waish then spoke of the facilities for reaching Augusta, declaring them to be excellent. He wanted the members of the convention to see Au wanted the members of the convention to see Au-gusta's thrift and progress. It was the Lowell of the south. There was no fixed rule for holding the convention in Affanta. Richmond county did not have, and would not have, a caudidate for gover-nor. He wanted the people of other parts of Geo-gia to become acquainted with the people of Au-gusta.

WORDS FOR ATLANTA.

Mr. Candler replied to Mr. Walsh. He said: "I Mr. Candler replied to Mr. Walsh. He said: "I hope the motion of the gentleman from the tenth district will not prevail. It is a violation of all precedent so far as Georgia is concerned. It is the custom for the convention to meet at the capital of the state, and there is not, nor can there be, any good reason for departing from the custom. Atlanta is the railroad as well as the political center of Georgia—the most accessible point in the state. Augusta is accessible to South Carolina. I am willing for South Carolina to make the nomination this year, but in the future I might not be. Augusta is not accessible to the state of Georgia. nation this year, but in the fature I might not be. Augusta is not accessible to the state of Georgia, certainly not half as accessible as Atlanta. Augusta claims, to be neutral territory. It is not more so than Atlants Fulton county has not nearly so many candidates as Richmond county would have under certain contingencies. In Augusta, you can throw a rock into South Carolina—"

Mr. Walsh—"It wouldn't hit a candidate."

Mr. Candler—"No, but it would if thrown into Augusta. [Laughter.] The place of holding the convention will have no influence upon the delegate, or upon the selection of a nominee for governor. I hope the substitute will be voted down."

Mr. Peeplea—"Iknow of no city that the members

ernor. I hope the substitute will be voted down."

Mr. Peeples—"I know of no city that the members of the convention would rather visit than Augusta.

But I am opposed to holding the convention in Augusta. The time for such a change is inopportune. The change would be declared to be a movement in favor of one of the prominent candidates. The people would charge the committee with improper majives. I believe in sticking to precedents, and holding the convention in the capital city."

capital city.' THE BATTLE WAXES FIRECE.

Mr. Whitehead—"THE CONSTITUTION Says Richmond county is fo. Gordon. Mr. Walsh says it is neutral. [Laughter.] Augusta is therefore the place for the convention." [Laughter and applause.]

Mr. Charlton—"I favor Augusta because holding the convention there would bring together different classes of the state's population. One city should not hold the monopoly of the conventions," Mr. W. A. Harris,—"I am opposed to carrying the convention to Augusta. It is too far off. I once voted to go with the legislature to Savannah.
[Laughter.] It required a month to get all the members back. [Renewed laughtes.] They have a drink down there that is stronger than it looks,"

Great laughter.]
Mr. Charlton—"We will be temperate to the shorn lamb, if you will come again." [Laughter and applause.]
Mr. Guerry earnestly opposed holding the convention in Augusta. ife said:

"The convenience of the people of Georgia should be considered in selecting a place for the convention. Atlanta is more central, and is therefore more convenient and less expensive. It might be a good idea to hold the conventions in the cen tral cities. But, to say nothing of the criticism that might result, Augusta is too far off, and it is too expensive reaching her. It would be unwise to make a change now. It would only increase the heat of the contest. Augusta is a beautiful and hospitable city, but the convention should not be held there. As to its neutrality, THE CONSTITUTION gives up Richmond county. The Macon Telegraph claims Fulton county for Bacon."

MR. THOMAS'S QUESTIONS.

Mr. Walsh said that the invitations read by the secretary were offered in good faith. The expense of going to Augusta would not be one cent greater than in going to Atlanta. It was the custom of the democratic party to hold national conventions in different cities. It was a good time for the democrats of Georgia to imitate the example, Mr. Thomas.—"Mr. Walsh has referred to the direct route from Columbus to Augusta, If I leave Columbus in the morning and go by way of Macon to Augusta, I read there on the morning of the next day. I can leave Columbus in the morning, pass through Opelika and Atlanta, and reach Argusta the night of the same day. [Leazhter, Atlanta is the railroad center of Georgia. lanta is the railroad center of Georgia.
Atlanta is the place for the convention. If Atlanta has a ring to govern the state, it does it admirably. Why, complain? Atlanta is a modest city. She always treats her visitors and her guests courteously. Why go to Augusta?"

Mr. Walsh-"I have said nothing against At-anta."

Mr. Thomas—"And I have said nothing against Augusta. [Applause.] Atlanta has heretofore been the place for the convention. It would be anomalous to take the convention to [Applause.] Why go to Augusta? What for Answer it in your own hearts, between yourselves and the democratic party of Georgia-what for? [Sensation and applause.] You know what for, and God knows. [Renewed sensation and applause.] Shall we take the convention over to the extreme eastern part of the state, while in the capital city is every facility. capital city is every facility for holding it?

Mose questions asked.
What for? Let the gentleman answer if they dare. What for? [Applause.] I thank the gentleman for his flattering mention of Columbus, but the capital city is the place for the convention. I is cosmopolitan. It is the place for a fair expression of the will of the people. Why go to Augus Mr. Charlton-"Don't you think the invitations from Augusta sufficient reasons for going there?"

Mr. Jones—"And sufficient reasons to prevent reflection on anybody's motives?"
Mr. Thomas, vehemently—"I intended no reflection." [Applause.]
Mr. Jones—"It was my intention to offer a reso-lution thanking Augusta for her invitation but de-cliping to accept it. Mr. Thomas's remarks are a effection upon the motives of the people of Au usta. I shall vote for Atlanta, but I desire to bank Augusta." [Applause.]

Mr. C. A. Turner—"I desire to state that after arriving in Atlanta I was prevailed on to vote for

Augusta. But, upon reflection, I find Atlanta so much more accessible, that I feel it my duty to yote for her." (Applause.) Mr. Walsh—"While Mr. Thomas has disclaimed

Mr. Walsh—"While Mr. Thomas has disclaimed any intention to cast a reflection upon the people of Augusta, yet he has injected a reflection into his remarks. General C. A. Evans, a warm supporter of Gordon, wishes the convention to be held in Augusta. Augusta desires to take no unfair advantage. Augusta and Richmond county did as much as any other section to re-establish democratic supremacy in the state." [Applause.]
Mr. Thomas—"I don't see how my remarks could be distorted into a reflection upon the people of Augusta. I wanted to know why the convention should go to Augusta, because I could seems vention should go to Augusta, because I could see no reason why it should. I don't doubt Augusta's sincerity. But I ask the gentlemen, and let them sincerity. But I ask the gentlemen, and le answer if they d are—why go to Augusta."

This ended the discussion. The chairmen put the question upon the substitute to insert "Augus-ta" in lieu of "the capital of the state." The year and nays resulted as follows:

ATLANTA SELECTED.
Yeas—Humber, Charlion. McArthur, Longley, mith, Whitfield, J. S. Turner, Daniel, Whitehead.

Nays-Guerry, Jones, Sweat, W. A. Harris, Gra-bam. Cutts, Thomas, Candler, Diamuke, C. A. Turner, R. R. Harris, Davis, Peeples, Tate.—14.

Walsh refused to vote.

The substitute was declared lost.

The first resolution, with the blanks filled so as to read. "12 o'clock, moon, on Wednesday the 28th day of July," was then unanimously adopted.

The second resolution was adopted without discussion.

cussion,
Mr. Candler moved to strike out the third resolution. The motion was seconded, and a long discussion ensued.
Mr. Guerry opposed the resolution because, if it should be adopted, it would be taking sides with one of the prominent candidates, and if it should be lost it would be taking sides with the other.
Mr. Peeples denied that the resolution favored one of the candidates. He said that it merely declared the custom of the party.
The motion to strike out was carried; yeas 17, nays 6.
Mr. Tate moved to strike out the fourth resolutioned for Neurith Column Fifth Page.

THREE YOUNG LADIES UNDERGO A TERRIBLE EXPERIENCE.

In an Open Boat Till Ten O'clook at Night-The Rescue-Saved after Considerable Difficulty-Other News Netes from the Central City - Personal and Otherwise.

Macon, May 20—[Special.]—Missis Annie Burghard and Minnie and Carrie Davis, are three charming young ladies who live out at Massey's, some miles from Macon.

A few days ago they decided to go a pleasuring, and procuring a boat they launched boldly out upon the pond. They did not proceed far before the boat became unmanageable. It was 4 o'clock when they set out, and about dusk they drifted on to a snag and could not help

THE BOAT WAS SLOWLY FILLING, and at length they got it off, and reached an other snag, a considerable portion of which was out of water. For five mortal hours they remained in this perilous position. Their shouts and shrieks failed to attract attention, and from some cause their absence was not noticed, About 9:30 Mr. Houser heard a faint "halloo" away up in the pond, and suspecting in search of a boat. Finding all those around the pond stove in, he had to go some distance with a cart and hauled a boat to the lake rustled around and procured a paddle and started to the rescue. When he reached the young ladies the boat was filled with water and the young ladies very much frightened and exhausted.

They were brought out by Mr. Houser. The ladies seem to have suffered no inconvenience from their night's experience:

Death of Rev. Dr. J. E. Evans.

MACON, Ga., May 20.—[Special.]—The death of Rev. Dr. J. E. Evans, presiding elder of the Augusta circuit, which took place on Tuesday night in Thomson, removes one of the most patriarchal figures in the Southern Methodist church. Next after the lamented Lovick church. Next after the lamented Lovick Pierce, perhaps "Uncle Jimmie Evans," as he was familiarly called by those who had grown up in the church under him, was the best known man in Georgia.

Rev. J. T. Lowe, who accompanied the remains to this place, gives the particulars of his death thus: On Saturday morning Dr. Evans went to Thomson to assist Mr. Lowe in the conduct of a meeting held at that place. Owing to the rain there were no services at the church on Tuesday. That night he repaired to the house of Mr. Curtis and after family prayers went to his room up stairs. As for the house of Mr. Curtis and after family prayers went to his room up stairs. As was his custom he arranged his clothes for the morrow, laid out his razor and shaving cup for a shave in the morning, and then, so it seems, sat down upon the side of the bed. About 8:30 o'clock Mrs. Curtis heard a noise in About 8:30 o'clock Mrs. Curtis heard a noise in his room as if some one had fallen, and going to the stairway called out to him. There was no response, and soon after Mr. Curtis endeavored to get into the room but found it locked. Failing to get an answer, Mr. Curtis broke the glass window, and on looking in discovered Dr. Evans lying on the floor. Gaining access to the room, Mr. Curtis found that Dr. Evans was dead. It is supposed that he died of apoplexy; and in falling struck his head against the back of a chair near the bed. The marks of the chair falling struck his head against the back of a chair near the bed. The marks of the chair could be seen on his face. Dr. Evans was in his 77th year. His ministerial life extends over more than half a century.

His daughters are Mrs. Daniels and Mrs. Glass, of Macon, Mrs. Patillo, of Griffiu, and Mrs. Strong, of Savannab.

Today at 11 a. m. a large crowd gathered at Mulberry street Methodist church to pay their respects to the distinguished dead.

"Rest from labor" was beautifully sung by the choir, then Dr. Warren, Rev. Mr. Thigpen and Rev. Mr. Wynn read different portions of scripture and offered prayer. Rev. Mr. Clisby read a hymn, which was sung by the congregation, and Rev. G. C Smith followed in a beautiful tribute to the worth of deceased.

Relieved by Death.

LAWRENCEVILLE, May 20.—[Special.]—Two very mysterious deaths have occurred recently near Suwannee in the family of Mel Chandler, Colored. One was an infant which, when it was being dressed for the coffin, showed signs of violence upon its head. Its mother was a daughter of Mel, and it is reported he is its father. This presents a case which the coroner will doubtless investigate.

Another girl child of Mel has acted improperly about the house while the mother of the dead child was confined to her bed, and Mel whipped her outrageously. A physician was called in in consequence thereof and he found the girl unconscious and devoid of reason. She remained senseless and insane for quite a while when death relieved her. Here, again the coroner's ceremonies might be in order.

Deaths in Gwinnett.

LAWRENCEVILLE, May 20 .- [Special.]-Mr. Reubin Mathis's, of Suwannes, two grown sons, Andy and Hardy, died this week, and another is very low. The disease with which they died is known as typho malarial fever, and is the same which invaded the town of Logansville last year and carried away so many. The physicians say it is not contagious, but all who come in contact with the disease are invariably prostrated.

But the old man declined, saying that he would go to the hills. The young mau left his father and approached the river—they lived on the Black Warrior. But a short time had elapsed after parting with his son, before the father concluded to take a "stand" for a deer. He had been standing but a few minutes until he heard something running through the bushes, and at once discovered it to be a deer. He raised his trusty rifle and fired, but was almost paralyzed when he heard his son cry out: "Oh, father, you have killed me!" His father hastened to him at once and discovered that he had that his son through the brain. He had fallen, but had gotten up and was wining the bleed from his gotten up and was wiping the blood from his face when his father reached him. The old man, wild with grief, asked his boy if he was hurt much, when the answer came: "Father, I will die." In a letter to his brother in Batord, in this county, Mr. Tuggle says that no pen or tongue could depict the horrible feelings he bad, to see the life-blood of his son ebbing away, and to know that he had given the fatal blow. The son lived about nine days after the sad occurrence and then died. The son leaves

THE RICHMOND, Va., May 20.-The Methodist Episcopal general conference consumed the greater portion of today's session in discuss-Episcopal general conference consumed the greater portion of today's session in discussing the reports of committees on missions. The board of missions was increased to twonty-five, and the bishops made ex-officio members. A paper was referred to the board of missions suggesting steps towards unifying Methodism in foreign fields. Bishop Keaner addressed the conference in opposition to the paper. Drs. If F. Cox of Texas. A. R. Winfield of Arkanas, E. E. Wiley of Virginis, and others also opposed the measure. Drs. M. B. Chapman of Missairi, Horace Bishop of Texas, h. C. Kelly of Tennessee, W. C. Black of Mississippi, J. S. Gardner of Virginis, and others favored the proposition of unification and comity. The discussion was the most carnets of the present session.

At the conclusion of the debate the committee's report recommending no changes in the status of our foreign mission work, was adopted by a vote of 106 to 87.

At 4 o'clock this alternoon the consecration of the four newly elected bishopstook place in the presence of an immense congregation. The sermon was delivered by Bishop McTyerie and the consecration services were conducted in accordance with the book of disciplin.

The new bishops are W. W. Duncan, of South Carolina; Charles B. Gallaway, of Missisippi; E. R. Hendrix, of Missouri, and Jos. S. Key, of Georgia.

THE POLYMNIA CLUB CONCERT.

A Brilliant Success Last Night at the Atlanta Female Institute.

The first concert by the Polymmia club last night at the Atlanta Female Institute, judged from an artistic or any other standpoint, was, in every way, a brilliant success. Under the direction of Mr. Alfredo Barili, the club has been trained so thoroughly since its organization some three months ago, that no sort of criticism can be offered that is not favorable. Nor is this, by any means, that is not favorable. Nor is this, by any means, fulsom preise. I Atlanta, as is well known, has not given that attention to musical matters the art deserves, but with the best judges present last night, there were nothing but favorable comments. Mr. Barili has labored zealensly and unostentatiously in Atlanta, and while his ability as a musician and director has never been questioned, his work last night places film foremost among America's artists. This is not saying too much, nor in disparagement to the claims of others.

The ctub was assisted by Mrs. Weston Katzenbergen, soprano: Miss Carrie Nathews, pianist: Mr. Sam'l P. Snow, baritone; Mr. M. J. Goldsmith, tenor. Following is a list of the Polymnia club membership:

deepest interest and perfect attention, a fact

The choruses were sung with as fine effect as anything ever heard in Atlanta. There was a perfect shading wherever needed, and enough volumn always to indicate the strength of the material in hand. "The Sea Fairies" was probably the best appreciated of the choruses, though it cannot be said that it was any better than the others.

The second number, "Concerto, op. 15, First Movement," from Beethoven, was fault-lessly rendered by Mr. Barili and Miss Mathews. It is a composition requiring the most delicate phrazing, time and shading, but these effects were attained by the performers without seeming effort. Mr. Goldsmith was in superb voice, and sang a selection from Faust better than anything he has attempted in Atlanta. The duo, "Like the Kiss," Verdi, by Messrs. Show and Goldsmith, was so much appreciated that the audience wanted more, but there was no response. A charming feature of the evening was the first audience wanted more, but there was no response.

A charming feature of the evening was the first number, part second, in which Miss Carrie Mathews played two selections from Rubenstein, "Etude" and "Polonaise." Miss Mathews's fame as a planist is well known to the people of Atlanta, but last night she fairly eclipsed all her former efforts. Her technique, shading and general execution are nothing short of wonderful, when the young lady's age is considered. There are no flourishes about her playing; she possesses the merit of going intelligently into her work, and never fails to bring out the foll merits of her selections. It is difficult to imagine how either of her selections last night could have been improved upon, The "Etude requires a difficult wrist movement, but she was night could have been improved upon. The "Etude requires a difficult wrist movement, but she was not even fatigued when it was over, and entered upon the more brilliant "Polonaise" with an ease and grace which so commended itself to her auditors that they sat in wonderment at her playing, and were loudist in their applause. That Miss Mathews will be the leading planist in the south, and one of the best in the country, there can be no donbt.

Mrs. Katzenberger sung three very sweet songs: "Ah! Mon Fies," "To My Turtle Dove," and "Fisher Maiden," in each of which she displayed her vocal powers to a marked degree. Her voice was never purer, and the audience gave her rapturous applause. Mr. Snow's solo, "Song of Hybrias the Cretan," Elliott, was one of his finest efforts, and but for the fact of his already recognized ability, more might be said. Altogether, Mr. Barili has just cause to be proud of his concert, and there is no fear of its being surpassed in Atlanta soon.

LABOR NOTES.

The machine men in the planing mills in St. Louis struck yesterday for an advance of wages and the adoption of the eight hour system. About 800 men are affected.

800 men are affected.

P. D. Armour, of Chicago, said last evening:
"We will give our men notice soon—before the end of the month—that we desire to return to the old ten hour system or shut up. There will be no strike, nor is it a lockout. It is not a bluff, but simply a business declaration. We cannot run unless at the old hours and prices, and do not lutend to make any fuss about it. All the packers have come to this agreement."

THE GEORGIA MIDLAND.

The Annual Meeting of the Company Held

COLUMBUS, Ga., May 20.—[Special.]—The annual meeting of the shareholders of the Georgia Midland railway was held in this city today. The Midland railway was held in this city today. The by-laws and rules governing the company were adopted, and the president and directors were authorized to mortgage the road for not exceeding $15,000 a mile to secure the issue of sufficient 6 per cent forty-year gold bonds to build and equip the line. The election for directors resulted in the selection of the following: G. P. Swift, Jr., J. F. Flournoy, Dr. N. J. Bussey, Theo. M. Foley and B. T. Hatcher, of this city: Seaton Grantland and W. J. Kincard, of Griffin, and J. W. Woolfolk, of Montgomery. At a subsequent meeting of the directors, Seaton Grantland was elected president; G. P. Swift, Jr., vice-president, and C. L. Davis, secretary and treasurer. There are now nearly 100 hands at work grading the road.

EDITORS CONSTITUTION :- Please announce to the friends of this enterprise that our engineer, Mr. Henry L. Collier reported yesterday as to the probable cost of a first-class three foot gauge railroad from Atlanta to Hawkinsville. The report places the cost of this road equipped at the sum of $653,000.

These figures correspond in amount with the cost places the cost of this road equipped at the sum of $653,000.

These figures correspond in amount with the cost of two narrow gauge roads recently built in Georgia, mamely: the Augusta. Gibson and Sandersville and the Americus, Preston and Lumpkin railroads. Our line will pass through as fine country as any line in the state, and we have determined that we will build it. Books will be opened at once in Atlanta and in every county on the line for subscriptions to the stock of the company. John N. Dunn.

RALEIGH, N. C., May 20.—Phenomenal neavy rains have fallen in the western and Piedmont sections of the state since Monday. Part of the mont sections of the state since Monday. Part of the great bridge over Yadkin river, on the North Carolina railroad near Salisbury, washed away. Several washouts on the Atlanta and Charlotte Air-Line are reported, and some damage done to the Atlanta, Tennessee and Ohio railroad. News has just been received of a railway accident caused by a derailment of a train near Alexander's on the Western North Carolina railroad.

A Tax on the Railroads. CHARLESTON, S. C., May 20 .- In the United tates circuit court, Chief Justice Waite has filed a decree dismissing the bill of the complainants in the case of the Central iTrust com-pany, of New York, trustee of the mortgage securing the first mottgage bonds of the Columbia and Greenville railroad company against C. O. Marshall treasurer of Richland country, as to the constitutionality of an act of the state legisleture authorizing a tax on the railroad company for the support of the railroad commis-sion.

The Second Louisians District, NEW ORLEANS, May 20 .- The election day in the second congressional district passed off quietly, as far as heard from. The vote in this city was very light. that he has been out of town in fifteen years. HEADLIGHT FLASHES.

Major J. W. Greene, general manager of the Georgia railroad, will spend today in Atlanta. Several changes among the conductors of the Southwestern railroad will soon take place. Three of the oldest officials on that line will resign.

Mr. S. W. Wilkes, freight agent of the Geor-gia railroad, has gone west. He will give his at-tention to business of a tender nature as well as of a railroad nature. Mr. T. J. Barnard, contracting freight agent of the East Tonnessee, Virginia and Georgia rail-road, left yesterday on an extended trip through the southern states.

On account of the break on the Pledmont Air Line between Lynchburg and Atlanta, the East Tennessee, Virginia and Georgia railroad and the Shenandoah Valley line will honor and take up tickets of east bound passengers by the former Conductor W. H. Rose, of the Central rail-road, has resigned. This will be regretted by his bost of friends. Conductor Rose is well known as one of the most competent, faithful railroad offi-cials in Georgia. He is noted for his reliability and for his uniform courtesy to his passengers. What-ever he may do in the future, he will always have the good wishes of all that know him. The tax returns of the Columbus and Rome railroad in 1885 were 255,000. In 1886 they were $157,000, a decrease of $102,000. In 1886 they were $157,000, a decrease of $102,000. The difference is explained by the officers of the road to be the result of too high a valuation in 1885. Comptroller-General Wright does not doubt the honesty of the returns, but they are so far below those of 1885 that he prefers to have a board of arbitrators decide whether or not they shall be allowed. Tickets to the east will be sold by the East

Tickets to the east will be sold by the Last Tennessee, Virginia and Georgia railroad and the famous Shenandoah Valley route, for one dollar less than by union depot lines, on account of the East Tennesse, Virginia and Georgia lines not being allowed to enter the Union depot. The New York express of this line, leaving Atlanta at 5:40 p. m., is doing a very large business. The sleepers go out every day filled to overflowing.

The historic train that conveyed Hon, Jefferson Davis from Atlanta to Savannah made the run in faster time than ever before attempted in Georgia, and yet it was made with absolute safety. Near Greenfield, Mass., a farmer gave his little son strychnine on a piece of candy, which killed the child.

Trouble.

On arrival of the 9:40 Richmond and Danville train Monday night last, a fine looking middle aged couple alighted and proceeded to the Kimball, where they remained until yesterday morning, when they left via the Georgia Pacific for Birmingham. While in Atlanta they were often seen together on the streets, and caused frequent comments. They were especially well dressed upon all occasions, and possessed that remarkable look of cutture and refinement which naturally attracts the attention of almost every one. However, it is quite different in Birmingham. They had not been there three hours before the lady was arrested for shop-lifting. She demanded an immediate trial which was given her. The husband was summoned for a witness in her behalf, but when placed on the stand he denied emphatically that this woman was his wife. Just at this juncture the woman interrupted and requested her husband to tell the truth. Excitement of spectators was intense.

There are many things which a man will not tell the truth about. That is that Baseball tobacco is the finest nine-inch tobacco on the market for many reasons too numerous and unnecessary to mention.

THE Gordon tide comes rolling on ! THE revolution of sentiment for Gordon against Bacon is without parallel or precedent in the history of Georgia.

MR. GLADSTONE is prepared for defeat on the home-rule question, and for the dissolu-tion of parliament. It will give him just what he desires, a chance to discuss his bill on the hustings before the people. The old premier is going to the country with all the confidence that he had in 1874.

ELSEWHERE is published an announcement by the incorporators of the Atlanta and Hawkinsville railroad. In a talk with Colonel John N. Dunn yesterday, that gentleman informed THE CONSTITUTION that the construction of the road was a certainty. The enterprise has been pushed vigorously, and the efforts of the leading spirits will not be relaxed until Atlanta and Hawkinsville are bound together by bars of steel.

Calling the Convention. If Augusta had ever had a chance of se curing the state convention, the treatment received by General Gordon on Wednesday night would have effectually dispose of it The only possible reason urged for A agusta's having the convention was the fact that it would offer a more impartial held for its to allow one of the candidates to finish the speech he had been invited there to deliver, that it is now to hope for impartiality. The preposition to carry the convention there was very properly voted down.

The date of holding the convention is fixed for the first time prior to August. The date fixed is a compromise, an attempt having been made to call it on July 14. The effect of the date on the campaign is about this: Major Bacon's friends, feeling that he had things pretty well fixed up, wanted the convention called before they could be changed. General Gordon's friends, noting the overwhelming revolution being effected in his favor, wanted time for that revolution to do its perfect work, and the people to be fully informed as to the issues of the campaign. The friends of Bacon were anxious to hurry the convention up and cut off fur-ther debate. The friends of Gordon wanted the convention called at the usual time, which would afford time for full discussion. The result was a compromise, which was better than was expected.

Our news columns give the details of the debate, which will disclose the sentiment of the committee on several points of public interest. The general result may be described as a defeat of the friends Major Bacon on the subject of carrying the convention to Augusta, and a compromise on their effort to shorten up the date of calling the conven-

An Outrage in Augusta.

The outrage committed on General Gorde in Augusta, where he was so hissed and jeered that he could not conclude his speech, will show the good people of Georgia the spirit that animates the opposition to him, and the legitimate result to which it is being driven by those who have determined to de stroy General Gordon.

Let us be exact about the extent of this ge. It is already indirectly hinted by the Bacon men that the reports of it are overdrawn. The facts do not show this. It was so indecent and so flagrant that Mr. J. C. C. Black ielt called upon so protest, al-though he is a Bacon man, and in rebuking is perpetrators, to say that "no cause de-served to succeed" that had to resort to served to succeed? that had to resort to such means. The indications are that this outrage was not only flagrant but deliberate.

The Bacon men organized at Clars Hall before the speaking, and the reports say "they had a lively meeting there." It is reasonable to suppose that the programme for the night was arranged at that pre-limitary meeting.

iminary meeting.

The scene was a disgraceful one. The turbulent and intolerant spirit that is back of it, is worse. The scar on Gordon's cheek, won in honorable battle, must have rebuked to the crazed with won in honorable battle, must have rebuked those who were not crazed with excitement, as a Georgia crowd in a Georgia city denied him the right of free speech. We are much mistaken if his old comrades in arms—if every man in Georgia who loves fair play—if every conservative and right-minded citizen—does not make this rebuke in the most emphatic manner. General Gordon has done nothing to deserve such treatment at the deserve such treatment at the Georgians. No living man has core to deserve better treatment. And cople will see that he has it, and that these who put this crowning ind n him are made to understand that such ethods will not win in Georgia.

The Colossus and the Cigarette Woeriahoffer, the dead speculator, will ive in history as one of the most brilliant and daring of the Wall street millionaires.

Like Gould, he began life in poverty. He started as an office boy, developed into a clerk, and finally blossomed out as a specu-For twenty years this man has been en gaged in the heaviest financial battles of modern times. The capitalists of the metropolis recognized his generalship and looked up to him as a leader.

He was a hard fighter, and he was generally successful. It is passing strange that such a man, gifted with a superb will-power, should have been slain in the most inglorious of conflicts, and vanquished by the pu-niest of antagonists.

This Colossus met his fate when he tackled the cigarette. A brief history of the strug-gle may serve to point a moral and convey a warning. Woerishoffer gradually drifted into the habit of inveterate smoking. He smoked fifty cigarettes a day. He kept it up fer fifteen years, inhaling the smoke all the time. Years ago Woerishoffer saw danger ahead. His head, heart, stomach and nerves remonstrated, protested, and begged him to change his course. In their agony they cried out against the flendish cigarette, and denounced it. Colossus grinned sardonically. When he got ready he would down the cigarette, and not before .

Slowly but surely the coils of smoke twined around their victim, tightening their gdp each day. The man's heart turned into a big sponge saturated with nicotine. Still the smoker continued the fight. He would lie down when too feeble to stand, and smoke while his heart beat at the rate of 120 a minute. He said : "Thave a Ger man stomach, and an American head: I am equal to anything."

At last he became alarmed. To his horror and amazement he found that he could not give up the cigarette. He tried time and again: He went to a famous medical man, and said: "You shall have $50,000 in gold if you will emancipate me from the cigarette." The physician worked hard, but it was no go. The big, strong man, the giant who tossed money kings about like babies, lay hopelessly crushed under a little rice paper pigmy.

"A remarkable case," the medical men say. Very; but there will be others like it. The Four New Bishops.

The new bishops who were ordained at Richmond yesterday have long been regarded as bright and shining lights in southrn Methodism.

The Rev. Dr. William Wallace Duncan a native of Virginia, and is now forty-seven years old. He is president of Wafford college, at Spartanburg, S. C., and is considered one of the ablest ministers in the church.

The Rev. Dr. Eugene Russell Hendrix was born in Missouri in 1847. He accompanied the late Bishop Marvin in his tour around the world. For several years he has been president of Central college, Missouri.

The Rev. Dr. Charles B. Galloway is a native of Mississippi, and for the past four years has been editor of the New Orleans Christian Advocate. He is a young man of about thirty-seven.

The Rev. Dr. Joseph S. Key is a Georgian.
He graduated at Emory college in 1848, and has been engaged in pastorial work since that time, being now stationed at the First Methodist church in Columbus. He is a man of distinguished learning and piety, and his elevation to the college of bishops is highly gratifying to the methodists of Georgia.

From every quarter comes expressions of the strongest approval, showing that the choice of the general conference gives complete satisfaction.

Not Wanted.

It is not a safe policy to look only on the bright side of things. There are warning examples to be studied in order to be shunned, and shoals and quicksands to be surveyed so that they may be avoided.

Mr. Beecher, the great Brooklyn preacher, always looks on the bright side. He is as much of an optimist as his celebrated conemporary and fellow-citizen, Dr. Talmage, A more hopeful and sanguine man does not

He says that we must expect to have the demagogues and dupes of Europe among us. He would not shut our gates against them. Let the anarchist come, says Mr. Beecher. Let the socialist and the communist, and the craziest of the theorizers of the old world come and be digested into American citizens.

This is brave talk, but is it wise talk? We have enough criminals of our own without encouraging the immigration of outlaws or conspirators who are only waiting the opportunity to become outlaws. It may be that this republic will escape the evils pe-culiar to other countries across the water, out that is no reason why we should not cuard against them. Instead of indulging n fanciful dreams about the reformation of the aparchists, socialists and communists, it will be found much the better course to bresk their heads whenever the occasion justifies it. The men who come to our shores to preach the gospel of dynamite should be warned in advance that the only place ready to receive them in this land of aw and order is the penitentiary.

About Free Trade. Free trade, or any movement in that direction, means the reduction of the wages of workingmen. This is what it has mean in Great Britain, and this has been the result in that country. Whenever more than one mill is shut down in the manufacturing districts of England, a large number of the spinners and their families seek refuge in the poor houses. At best, the workingmen of all classes in England, are but one remove from the poor house. Practically they are paupers, and it is only by a hand-to-mouth struggle that they keep out, even when they are most prosperous. This is the condition to which the free traders would reduce the workingmen of this country. Strikes wo mean shutouts, and shutouts would m the poor bouse,

When Napoleon, in his boyhood, attended the military school of Brienne, he figured in the reports as "very healthy." There was not a mark opposite the little Corsican's name to indicate either intellectual brilliancy or advancement in knowledge. He struck his teachers as "a very healthy" boy, nothing more.

All things considered, this is the very best school report that can be made until the pupils reach such a stage of physical development as will enable them to hold their own, and stand the strain of close confinement and continuous study. Parents seldom receive such reports these days. It would be better for all concerned if they did.

Vapors and Capers.

Uncle Johney New's little paper, the Indiapapolis Journal, has been thrown into another severe fit by a letter from an Atlanta pegro to an Indianapolis negro. The Atlanta negro tries very hard to impress on the mind of his colored brother at the north that the war is about to be fought over again, and he succeeds fairly well. His letter has been given to Uncle Johncy New for publication and Uncle Johncy appears to be very much disturbed by it.

One of the most ominous scenes observed by the Atlanta negro during the demonstrations that accompanied the unveiling of the Hill statue, is thus described by him. "I saw one, Burr by name, representing a New York daily, in the rebel procession with a rebel flag in his hat." As THE CONSTITU-TION remarked at the time, such a horrible outcome as this is worthy of comment.

The Atlanta negro was not a very close observer, otherwise he would have seen other northern correspondents in the rebel procession with rebel flags in their hats and the aroma of mint julips distilling through their nostrils. Even Uncle Johncy New, had he been in our midst, as Editor Dana's cat would say, would have capered with the boys.

The Joint Discussion.

ATLANTA, Ga. May 20, 1886 .- To the Demogratic Voters of the State: In conversation with Captain E. P. Howell, I suggested that the violent person altics of the campaign threatened the peace and good order of the state, and that they should be stopped at once. He agreed with me heartily. As the result of our conversation we made the follow-ing agreement about the joint discussion: This is solely in the interest of the party, and is not to be continued, either directly or indirectly in the interest of either candidate. PATRICK WALSH

SAM JONES AND SAM SMALL

How the Two Revivalists Pass the Days Jones Hits at His Enemies. BALTIMORE, May 19 .- Sam Jones and Sam Small have been to work here for some days now. Jones finds ministers in nearly every town he visits who do not approve of his methods. Yesterday he hit out at a man who had been denouncing him. The sword thrusts were not numerous, bu they were keen. The occasion was found at th forward to the desk in his quiet, characterist way. He picked up Mr. Small's little moroco bound Bible, and holding it up to the big congregation said:

If this little bnneh of paper I hold in my hand is God's truth, then it outweighs all the univers of suns and stars. If this book is true, am I crazy? Am I fanatic? I tell you, if it is true, I want to be so crazy that I will walk all over the city on my knees to save poor, perishing sinners? What's more, if this book is true, there are 20,000 crazy Christians in Baltimore. They're so crazy that they won't pray, they won't work, but if they don't look out they'll walk with their arms folded right down into the jaws of hell. People say Small and I exaggerate. Exagerate! Why, you can't exagerate what sin is doing, I'd just as soon try to exagerate the beauties of heaven! What is it? I'm standing right on the Ten Commandments and the Sermon on the Monnt. Ain't you? If you are, ain't we standing hand in hand? Oughtn't we to stand shoulder to shoulder? But are you standing there? That's the question?

"Who's this preacher that's denouncing me in this city?" I asked a friend yesterday.

"Why, don't you know?" replied my friend. He's the man that the liquor people got to deliver a lecture and paid him for it. (Smfles.)

I am glad I know why he opposes me, continued Mr. Jones. It's always the hit dog that hollers. (Laughter.) I never was in Baltimore before and didn't know anybody here. I didn't ask anybody to let me come, but I'm here because your pastor, Rev. Dr. Murkland, and other leading ministers and laymen invited me. No, when you hear people on the corner discussing he rink and the revival and the revivalists, some fellow will come up and ask: "Been around?" You may say: "No: I don't endorse these men." Rev. Sam Jones is as plain and unassuming as a notable man can be. He goes on the principle that the great can as well afford to be unassuming as can the rich to be plain, and he has brought simple creed to the perfection of practice. He and Mr. Small, Mr. Maxwell, the chorister, and Mr. Taylor, the stenographer, occupy a suit of rooms at the St. James hotel. Mr. Jones sleeps alone, and at the St. James hotel. Mr. Jones sleeps alone, and has a large, pleasant room on the second floor looking out on Centre street. When the second floor looking out on Centre street. When the set crowded he "doubles up!" with Mr. Small, and then Mawell and Taylor double up.

There is scarcely anything in Mr. Johnes' daily life at the hotel to specially distinguish it from that of many another of the guests. He rises usually at 70 clock and goes into Mr. Small's room, or the latter goes into his room, as the case may be, and they have prayers. Then they repair to breakfast. A favorlie dish with both is oatmeal and cream. They must have fruit at all their meals. They were raised on fruit and they have not yet learned how to get along without it. Broiled steak is a pretty steady order from Mr. Jones. For a drink he likes lemonade—and coffee. Now, that he has given up tobacco, he concentrates his affections on these two beverages, hese two beverages, After breakfast Mr. Jones reads his letters. The these two beverages.

After breakfast Mr. Jones reads his letters. These accumulate at the rate of fifty a day. They are of all sorts. They come from infidels, drunkards, blacklegs, tramps, ministers, church members, from people who have been moved by his sermons, and from people who appear to take keen delight in elaborately explaining that they have not been moved by his sermons, and last, but not least by a good bit, from his friends and from his wife. He writes to Mrs. Jones every day, Studay included, and she knows where he is every minute of his time-just as positively as though she were with him. It is Mr. Jones custom, when remaining in a place for several weeks, to have his wife to come to him and spend a few days with bim. She is tall, handsome, queenly looking woman, of Kentucky parentage, highly educated, and intelligent and accomplished, she has her heart and soul in her family and with her husband in his evangelistic pilgrimages. Her children are Joneses, every one of them, from their shoes up, and they show it in their photographs, which Mr. Jones always carries around with him.

But to return to the letters. Some of them are in an inthusiastic, encouraging vein from Christians; others are full of inquiry and pleading from seekers after religion; others scoff and sneer and abue, and sometimes there are letters that breathe forth dire threats of vengance. Most of the latter, indeed all, with a few exceptions, are anonymous. Then there are invitations to order and abue, has seepted only one invitation tox dine, and has was one friday afternoon, when he took dinner with Dr. James Carey Thomas. After reading and going through his correspondence, Mr. Jones does not mind abuse. When he strikes that kind of a letter he tosses it aside with the remark; "Another yelpin" cur a followin us."

The letters having been brunked aside, the two evangelists devote an hour or not to receiving callers, the does his sendangener on the neather and purpose as the letters and offen as Duraceae.

The letters having been brushed aside, the two evangelists devote an hour or so to receiving callers. They are as various in character and purpose as the letters, and often as numerous. They are ministers, members of the executive committee having the revival in charge, seekers, drun ards and not a few who are influenced by the merest motives of curiosity. He is a great friend to the poor. So is Mr. Small. Both give literally to those who really deserve charity. At the conclusion of the levee, Mr. Jones and Mr. Small sometimes take a stroll previous to the noon meeting at the Young Men's Christion association building. They go anywhere and everywhere, but they canott pass a sede water fountain to save their liver.

The story of John Wilkes Booth and his tragic death will ever be one of interest to the reader. There is something so mysterious connected with if, that many refuse to believe in the assassin's death, and stoutly maintain his existence. In a talk with Dr. G. G. Roy, of this city, he furthered some particular's of Booth's death not be then incident. nished some particular's of Booth's death not be-fore known, and what is more, these incidents were narrated by the principal in rendering relief to the dying man. Said the doctor

On a visit to my daughter, Mrs. Dr. Webb, ling Green, Caroline county, Va., last Chr I was permitted an interview with Miss I was residing at the Garrett homestead, Wilkes Booth stopped after the assessing President Lincoln, and where he was co and died from the rifle abot of Boston Cor found Miss H. a most intelligent and inte and died from the rine abor of Boston Corbett. I found Miss H. a most intelligent and interesting talker, a teacher by profession. She was deliberate and careful in her conversation, and though demanding that her name should not be published, frankly answered and enlarged upon every question propounded to her; and of the veracity of her every statement I have not the slightest doubt.

The Garrett homestead is situated on the Rappa-hannock river, twenty miles south of Frederick-burg and two miles north-of the village of Port Royal, on the same river. On the north side of the river, opposite this village, is Port Conway. To this place Booth came the Sund. afternoon after the assessitation. He sent Harro therose the river to Port Royal to know if there were any confederate officers there. Learning that there were, he and Harrold went across the river and were met by Lieutenant Ruggles and a young man, Willie Jett. It seems that Harrold was very confiding in his communications to these young men, and had informed them who Booth was This very much displeased Boothe, who very severely chided Harrold for his indiscretion. Miss H. said that about noon on Monday three men came from the main road down the lane to Mr. Richard Henry Garrett's house, where I was residing in the capacity of teacher. One was ri-ding alone, and two were on one horse. These two proved to be Jett and Booth. Mr. Garrett be ing out on the farm, they were met by some of the ladies of the family, and Jett, speaking, requested permission to leave his triend Mr. Boyd, who had been wounded at the evacuation of Petersburg, and needed a few days' rest. They were invited to remain until Mr. Garrett reached the house, and they accepted. He soon came, when Jett said: "Mr. Garrett, let me introduce to you my friend, Mr. Boyd, who was wounded at Petersburg, and whom we would like for you to take care of for three days, when we will come and take him away." Mr. Garrett said: "But who are you? You are all strangers to me, and though would like to accommodate any one in distress, am very poorly prepared to do so now." Jett quickly said: "My name is Jett." Mr. Garrett said: "Are you a son of William Jett, of King George | county?" Jett replied: "I am." Mr. Garrett then said; "If that is so, your father is an old friend of mine. We once did business together, and if you are his son, I don't feel willing to turn away your friend, who seems to be hurt, as he is on crutches." He then invited them into the house. Boyd, who was J. Wilkes Booth, remained. The other two (Jett and Ruggles) rode off, promis ing to be in often to see after their friend, and that on Wednesday they would call and take him away. They came late in the afternoon to see "Boyd," and had a short conversation with him, and rode off again. A Lieutenant Bainbridge was at Port Royal, and was one of the party to meet

Miss H. says: Harrold came on Tuesdeay and remained with Booth. Booth was an intensely interesting talker, and as gantle and refined in his deportment, as a lady. He in his deportment as a lady. He got along very well on crutches, and when an offer was made to dress his wound he refused, saying it did not trouble him and he did not mind it. None of the Garrett family, up to this time, had heard of the assassination of President. Lincoln. On Tuesday, the day after Booth came Then they heard for the first time of the assassina tion. They returned by dinner, and at the dinner table told what they had heard of the murder of the president. Booth was present and Miss H. says was an intent listener, without the slightest emotion or any change of countenance except that of great surprise, which pervaded all seated at the table. [Mr. Garrett, Sr., very quickly remarked: "I hope it is not so. I believe it would be one of the greatest calamities that could befall us." Booth, up to this time silent and without emotion, a little excitedly said: "Do you think that?" Mr. Garrett replied: "Yes, I do." Booth that good will come of it to the south." He asked one of the young Garretts if he heard any of the particulars of the assassination, and if there was a reward offered for the party doing it. Young Garrett replied that he had heard that $25,000 reward was offered. Booth remarked that he thought that rather a pitiful reward for the slayer of the president.

Miss H. says that after Harrold came, he and Booth would walk and sit together, and seemed very much engaged in conversation. She noticed that they watched the main road very vigilantly and when they would see a dust, as if there was some one passing along, they would hurry to the house and come inside, but never was the suspicion of a single member of the femily aroused as to their being other than confederat soldiers trying to get home.

On Wednesday there was a big dust in the road as if there might be passing bodies of troops. Booth seemed somewhat excited, and asked one of the ladies, "Please be so kind as to step up to my room and get my pistol," which was hanging of the head of his bed. She went and brought it to him, and in raising his coat to buckle it around his waist she noticed that he had on three others, making four, each carrying six loaded chan pers. Jett and Ruggles called this day (Wednes day), and Mr. Garrett wanted to know when they were going to take their friend Boyd away. did not return. They had quite a lengthy talk with Booth and Harrold before they left, after which they both seemed to be nervous and rest

Night approaching, Booth asked if there was not a vacant outhouse that he and his friend could stay in during the night. This aroused the anxiety ily, and Mr. Garrets propour very critical questions, suggested by this require told them he was afraid there was someth wrong about them and he had been imposed upon. Booth assured him he was mistaken. They were gentlemen, and had not done anything of which they were ashamed. He told them if they wanted to hide out they had better go to the woods or down to the marsh. They were the places for runaways. He finally consented that they could stay in an empty tobacco barn about fifty yards distance from the house, and to this they repaired. Booth had tried the day before to buy the horses of the two young Garretts, but hav-ing no other means of cultivating a crop, they re-fused to sell. Their going to the barn to sleep aroused the apprehension of the two that they could possibly see, was to stead their horses. So they locked the tobacco house door, took the key to the house, gave it to Miss H. and she hung it on a nail in the piece of the chamber. The young men, arming themselves, ecreted themselves in another outhouse, fronting the barn door, to keep watch over their horses. It must have been that at their interview burn it down with the two men in it. At this time Booth came to a crack in the and said to the men: "Do not down the parn and destroy the man's property. He is in no wise responsible or to blame for my being here. The owner of the property has no knowledge of me at all—who I am or what I am. You can burn me alive, but I will never sur-render." Miss H. said Booth had four pistols and could have killed twenty-four of the federals, but said to them: "Gentlemen, I will not hurt a hair of your head, but f you are brave men you will give me a chance for my life. I will come out if you will give me ten steps." This being refused, he said: "I will do it if you will give me five stern distance, and this is all the chance of my life I will ask of you." Both propositions were refused. Booth then said:

Jets told Booth and Harrold that they were in danger, for Jett knew, as will be shown. This is why Bouh did not want to remain in the howith Mr. Garrett's family.

"There is a man up here who wants to surrender.
Let him come down before you fire the barn." Harrold then went down and surrendered to the officer in charge. Just after this one of the men put fire to a bundle of dry hay and threw it into the loft, and this set fire to some loose hay and other combustible material in the loft, and it was by the light of this fire that Boston Corbett saw Booth through a crack and fired, his unerring ball striking Booth just under the left ear, penetrating the neck and coming out on the right side. Booth fell, and they supposed him dead, and they forced one of Garrett's sons to go up into the loft, then in a light blaze, and bring Booth out. In deing this the young man was to ribly burned. Booth was taken to the porch of Mr. Garrett's house, supposed to be dead, but was not. He opened his eyes and they proposed to put a palow "No, let me die here, under his head, but he said: just as I lay." They offered him wine, but he re-fused it. They sent to Port Royal for a physician, floping to revive him. Dr. Urquahart came but he

After refusing the wine Miss H. dipped the and of her handkerchief in a goblet of fresh water, put it to his lips. He sucked it, and opening his eyes said: "Tell my mother I died for my country and what I thought was best for it."
He lived but a short time. A little struggle, just as he died, threw a lock of his jet black hair over his marble white forehead, which Dr. Urquahar clipped off at the request of Miss H. she thinking it would be a sweet memento for some friend or relation of his, who might in time call to learn comething of the last scenes in the life and death of J. Wilkes Booth, for then she and all the family had learned from the soldiers that it was he, and the assault of President Abraham kincoln.

J. Wilkes Booth died on the naked porch tor of Mr. Richard Henry Garrett, of Caroline count-Virginia. Lieutenant Baker, of the United State detective force, who accompanied Lieutenan Dougherty, commander of the squad, wrapped the body in an old army blanket, and it was placed in an ox-cart, driven by Fred Freeman, a negro, to the Rappahannock river. Its disposition afterwards, though for a long time, and with many is to this day, a mystery, is well known to the United States government and the family of Mr. Booth.

Miss H. informed me that young Jett betrayed the confidence reposed in him by Harrold in Port Royal, who told him and Lieutenant Ruggles who Booth was and his secret, and that he placed him at Mr. Garrett's in order to get time to inform t at Mr. Garrett's in order to ge authorities at Washington of Booth's whereabouts.
This he did by telegraphing from Milford's a station on the Richmond, Fredericksburg and Potomac railroad, twenty miles south of Fredericks burg, Va., and while waiting for the authorities to capture him, he spent the most of his time in Bowling Green, Va., paying court to his lady love. But young Jett never spent a happy day afterward. He had caused the death of his father's sid friend, Mr. Garrett, from treatment received at the hands of the federal soldiers; had his two some imprisoned for a year or two, and brought pe ruin upon the entire family. These things preyed upon his mind, till reason was dethroned, and he died early in a lunatio asylum, constantly muttering the prayer while ha lived: "Oh, Mr. Garrett, forgive me for having done you to much wrong."

Miss H. says the blood spot where Booth's head lay on the porch at Mr. Garrett's has been visited by thousands of curiosity-seekers and lovers, and that a large sum was offered for the plank where the blood spot was made. She gave me a part of the lock of hair taken from Booth's head wrapped in a piece of the black silk in which the hair was wrapped when clipped. She has given away nearly all of it, and said she would not dispose of any more, as she would like to keep a few hairs as a relic.

The compulsory law having been repeated, and the steamship companies having refused to carry the mails for the compensation offered by the postmaster general, that officer was placed in a strait. Mails were collecting on the wharves at San Francisco, and a Pacific mail steamer refused to take them, and the postmaster general was forced to telegraph his agent at San Francisco to buy a passenger ticket and take the mail as baggage. The mails, he contended, should be carried with some regard for decency and propriety. The compulsory law was repealed, and he defied the house to re-enact it.

The democratic administration came into power and put the ban of its condemnation upon the proposition. The policy of the administration on this subject could not be mistaken, and when the United States senate in violation of its rules—in violation of ate, in violation of its rules-in violation of the principle that general legislation should not be placed upon appropriation bills—sought to force this proposition upon the administra-tion, there was an audacity and boldness exhibited that needed to be met with courage. The issue was plain and clear cut, and for one he was willing, as a democrat, to take the responsibility for his action.

The Marietta Journal says:

It is said that Major Bacon not only resigned the office of adjutant of the Ninth Georgia regiment, the first year of the war, and got out of the reach of the bullets for a bomb-proof position in the commissary department, but that heafterwards became a targatherer. And yet the Athens Banner says "Bacon faced as many bullets as Gordon." The poor soldiers' wives from whom he collected the tax deubtless don't think so.

EDITORS CONSTITUTION: Up to reading your paper yesterday morning I was for Bacon-When I had read of the manner in which General Gordon was treated in Augusta I was for Gordon, I tried to reason myself into believing that the report was untrue; but when I saw where Major Black a Racon man had to set un twice and here port was untrue; but when I saw where anyone Black, a Bacon man, had to get up twice and beg that General Gordon be heard, I could doubt no longer. I began to wonder if John B. Gordon ever thought, when suffering with five wounds received in one battle, where he fought for Georgia's honor, that he would be denied the right to speak before a Georgia sudience, especially in behalf of a man who had left the army and become a commissary. Fair play is a jewel that sets in Georgia's diadem, and the outrage put upon General Gordon by Major Bacon's friends in Augusta will be answered at the ballet box. I am not alone in the view I take of this matter,

J. S. H.

A Card from Ex-Senator Long. LEESBURG, Ga., May 19—Editors Consti-ution:—In justice to other friends of General ordon allow me to say that I stated that on Mon-Gordon allow me to say that I stated that on Monday before the election there were but three pronounced Gordon men in Leesburg. And I will correct another mistake. General Gordon, by his friends, agreed to speak a quarter of an hour in opening—Major Bacon to speak one hour and a quarter and General Gordon to close in one quarter of an hour. Owing to the fact thal Major Bacon asked General Gordon to auswer on a number of points not touched in his first speech, and Mr. Bacon himself having falled to finish in his allotted time, he vas granted as much time as he wanted by a voteo—he meeting, with the understanding that Ge-ral Gordon's fifteen minutes should be likewise extended to him. Major Bacon spoke one hour and twenty-five minutes and General Gordon in conclusion twenty-five minutes. Major Bacon them wanted another turn and many left the hall. Some friends of General Gordon thought strange of him for leaving, but none failed to change their their opinion, that I am aware of, who knew of the understanding as to time. It didn't look much like running when Major Bacon slipped off to Smithville that evening and General Gordon followed him and convinced him that instead of three Gordon men in Smithville there was a handsome majority for him as was proven by that impromptu meeting after 9 o'cloc's at night in Smithville, and by the fact that General Gordon received a majority of the votes cast from Smithville last Saturday.

Respectfully,

This was done for the purpose of bringing both bills formally before the house.

The senate committee on commerce will continue its daily meetings, having permission to sit during the sessions of the senate to consider the river and harbor bill. It has concluded to make a preliminary study of the measure as it came from the house—item by item—before depthing upon anything, and its members have agreed not to make any discussures regarding the committee's work until the preliminary examination shall be completed.

Senator Brown has submitted proposed amendments to the bill to increase the sun appropriated for improving the harbors of Bronawick and Savannah, Ga., to $50,000 for the former and $33,500 for the laster.

tion. The motion was seconded by Mr. W. A. Harris.

Mr. Guerry stated his reasons for opposing the resolution. It might be construed as favoring another of the candidates. He believed the executive committees of the counties would do their duty as well as the state executive committee would do its duty. He wanted the people to act for themselves.

would do its duty. He wanted the people to act for themselves.

Mr. Peeplez—"The people of Georgia are no upon a level with the state executive committee in information and intelligence."

Mr. Thomas was opposed to striking out the resolution. He said: "The people look to the state executive committee to speak in plain terms of plans for electing delegates to the convention. The committee is the first organized body to speak. We send our recommendations to the executive committees of the counties, and they act upon it."

SOME SALTY TALK.

Mr. Thomas then created a sensation by attacking the action of counties that have already se-ing the action of counties that have already selected delegates.

"Some of the counties," he said, "have already selected delegates—selected them before there was a preper organization of the party machinery. If those delegates are admitted to seats in the convention, why, then, let independentism run rampant! [Great sensation and applause.] I repeat it, some counties have selected delegates before the meeting of the state executive committee. Let those delegates come to the convention along with others selected after the meeting of the state executive committee, and it is easy enough to say which will be seated. We must pursue the recognized methods of the democratic Mr. W. A. Harris-"My reason for opposing the resolution is that it doesn't show proper respect for me as chairman of my county executive committee." [Great laughter.]

The chairman put the question upon the motion to strike out the fourth resolution, with the following result: Yeas, 19; nays, 4.

The motion was declared carried.

Mt. Guerri moved to strike out the fifth resolution.

Mt. Peples—"That resolution ought to be adopted. At the convention two years ago, one man voted five proxies, and another boasted that he represented fifteen counties.

Mt. Sweat thought the convention should be the judge of the qualifications of its members.

Mr. sweat thought the convention should be the judge of the qualifications of its members.

Mr. Jones offered the following substitute:
Resolved, That we deem it to the true interests of the democratic party, and harmony in its ranks, that the people in the different counties in the state be represented in the convention by delegates who are bona fide residents of the counties they represent, and not by proxies in the hands of non residents. WORK IN CONCLUSION.

Mr. Guerry opposed the resolution on the ground that it was the business of the convention to judge of the qualifications of its members; but, in deferof the quantications of its members; out, in deter-ence to what appeared to be the will of the com-mittee, he withdrew his motion to strike out.

The question was then put upon the substitute offered by Mr. Jones, which was lost. The original resolution was unanimously

The chairman submitted a communication from Hon.Henry A.Smith, of Bryan county, complaining that Chatham county always manages to secure the senator from the first district, and praying that the committee devise a plan to prevent a repetition of the "scoop" at least occasionally in the future. Mr. Candler offered a resolution of thanks to Augusta for her invitation to the committee to hold the nominating convention there. The reso-luiton was supported by Mr. Peeples in a brief speech in praise of Augusta, and was then unani-mously adopted.

On motion of Mr. Jones, thanks were returned to the proprietors of the Kimball house for their courtes, in providing a place of meeting for the ommittee, On totion of Mr. W. A. Harris, thanks were returned to the chairman and the secretary for their valuable services.

The chairman appointed Messrs. Canlder, Dismuke and Longley a committee to arrange the hall for the convention.

The committee then adjourned, to meet in the senste chamber at the capitol at 10 o'clock a. m., on Wednesday, the 14th day of July next.

What An "Empty Sleeve" Would Do. What An "Empty Sleeve" Would Do.

DAWSON, Ga., May 20.—[Special.]—Mr. William Hunter, constable in the 3rd district of this county, was in town on yesterday. A gentleman who saw him standing on the streets at a short distance from him remarked to a friend near by: "I'll bet a dollar Billie Hunter is for Gordon for governor, though I have never heard how he stood on the overtion." On being asked how he would nor, though I have never meant how he stood on the question." On being asked how he would vote for governor, Mr. Hunter held up his right arm which had beemshattered by bullets while he served as a brave confederate soldier, and thus rendered virtually useless to him, replied: "I would walk forty miles to vote for General John B. Gordon."

General Gordon has made the following ap pointments for this week: Lexington on Thursday, May 20th. Greenesboro on Friday, May 21st. Madison, Saturday, May 22d, 9 a. m.

Conyers, Saturday, May 22d, 2 p. m. Pending the arrangements for a joint discussion of the state, Major Bacon is invited to meet General Gordon at these appointments and accept a division of time with him.

GORDON'S APPOINTMENTS.

The arrangement for Madison and Conyers has been changed, so as to satisfy both. General Gordon will speak in Madison at nin o'clock a. m. on Saturday next.

Taking the fast train he will reach Conyers at noon, where he will speak at two o'clock p. m. on Saturday.

This arrangement is positive. Let the people o Madison and Conyers be governed accordingly.

EX-GOV. JAMES M. SMITH

Will address the people of Gilmer and surrounding counties on Friday, May 21, 12 O'clock, on the subject of "The Rights of the People and the Rights of Corporations, as they Touch Upon the Issues of the Present Campaign."

After saking: "Have we any croakers in Virginia?" the Industrial South remarks that Hon. A. O. Lane, mayor of Birmingham, Als., don't like croakers; in fact, he has no toleration for them. He says: "If I were deputed by his satanic majesty, and forced to send a curse upon this state, and given power to choose my own instruments of waste and desolation, I would never select locusty, that sometimes sweep over Europe, darkening the heavens, or grasshoppers that march through the west, leaving desolation in their track, or floods that now and then make Loulsiana a vast waste of waters; or cyclones that bring terror to the stoutest neart, or cholera that sweeps away its thousands but leaves the living in health and vigor. No: I would choose rather a horde of croakers, whose croakings and eroakings and croakings are more dismal than the croakings of frogs in marshy ponds, and then without awaiting the results, I would report the work thorough and complete, in tilling the hopes and sapping the energies and benumbing the industries of the people." And his honor might have added that when an enterprise is once filled by the croakers it generally remains dead.

General Gordon's friends throughout the General Gordon's friends throughout the state who are anxious to hear him speak should bear with the committee that is in charge of his appointments. The demand on his time is overwhelming, and a committee of his friends has filled appointments up to the first Tuesday in June in such a way as to make a beginning on what will be a comprehensive canvass of the state, if time is permitted before the calling of the convention. General Gordon has spoken once every day, and occasionally twice a day since he entered the race, and will continue to do this.

In the meantime those communities that have forwarded petitions to him, understand that it's his desire, and the desire of his friends, to have him speak in every community in Georgia that he can possibly reach, and he will fill those appointments which seem in the judgment of his friends to bring him face to face with the greatest number of people.

The Kendall company was greeted with a good sized audience last night in "Joshua Whitcomb," and their interpretation of the play was good indeed. The play is quite a laughable one, and was highly appreciated by all who saw it. The singing of Miss Callie Barbour was excellent, and received great applause.

Stocks as Reported at the New York Stock Exchange.

NEW YORK, May 20 .- The market this morning gave no sign of any change in the situation, the only feature being weakness in New York Central following the statement for the quarter, but the stock was supported and quickly regained its tone. In the afternoon, however, there was conspicuous buying of St. Paul, and the rumor quickly gained credence that Armour was buying stock. There was a rush to cover and prices responded quickly. The remainder of the market sympathized and prices moved up all along the line and the market closed firm. Jersey Central and Lackawanna are each up 13% per cent, St. Paul 13%, Louisville and Nashville, Northwestern and Western Union each 1/8, and other active stocks fractional amounts.

Columbia.

Citate of Georgia, Muscogee county—By Vairtue of the power vested in us under the terms and conditions of a certain deed of trust executed to the undersigned J. Rhodes Browne and A. Higes, trustees, by the Columbia manufacturing company, of Muscogee county, state of Georgia, dated March 1, 1884, whereby the said corporation conveyed to us all the property, real and personal, hereinafter described, in trust, to secure the payment of the actual issue of the back and the interest.

conveyed to sair use the payment of its certain issue at home and the interest coupons thereof as in said trust deed specified and enumerated (all of which appears duly of resent to Mortrage Deed Book "A." folios 35 to 375, March 5, 1884, in the clerk's office of superior court Missuegee county, Georgia and in Record Deeds, volume O O, pages 81 to 88 inclusive, March 22, 1884, office of the probate court in the county of Lee, state of Alabama, and in conformity with the directions and terms prescribed in the resolutions passed by the holders of said bonds, on April 24, 1886, under the authority conterred by said deed of trust. We will sell in the city Columbus, Muscogee county, Georgia on the 8d day of August, 1886, between the legal hours of sale, in front of the ancient of the said of fractions numbered ninety-one (91) and ninety-two (92), and island number three (3) in Chattanoocnee river, and a small enciosure stuated east of the residence formerly occupied by J. R. Clapp, used as a residence and grazing lot, containing seven (7) acres more or less. All of said lands last described ying and being in the county of Muscogee and tate of Georgia, and together with said lands in Lee county, Alabama. containing eight hundred and thirty (830) acres more or less.

Also, all of the said Columbus manufacturing company's buildings on said land in Muscogee county, Ga., operated as a cotton factory, and with all of the improvements in any manuer appendant and appurtenant thereto, inclusive of the cards, spindles, tooms, machinery and fixtures of every kind whatever contained in said buildings also all and singular the other improvements on all of the lands aforementioned and described; also the entire water power owned and controlled by said Columbus manufacturing company on and in said Chattaheochee river, together with all and singular the rights and franchises by the said Columbus manufacturing company held and possessed therein under the laws of Georgia.

The plant of said cotton factory consists at present of 4,544 spindles, 149 100ms and other suitable machinery, all in good condition and producing good work. Present capacity 7,500 yards a day of heavy sheetings and shirtings, three yards to the pound.

The operatives' houses and improvements gen-good work. Present capacity 7,500 yards a day of heavy sheetings and shirtings, three yards to the pound.

The operatives' houses and improvements generally in excellent condition, labor abundant, lands elevated and location of property unsurpassed for health, convenience and economical production—free from the burden of municipal taxes paid by all the other Columbus mills, yet within three miles of the city of Columbus and three quarters of a mile of Columbus and Rome railroad. The water power is the finest in the south, controlling and embracing the whole bed of the Chatsthoochee river for the distance of about one mile along the lands of the company, said lands extending along its banks upon the Georgia and Alabama sides of the river. Only a small portion of the water power is required and utilized in running the present mill and the natural falls in the river render but a simple inexpensive dam of logs and plank necessary. This magnificent water power is easily controlled and has a fall of forty-two and a half (42/2) feet within three-quarters (%) of a mile. With a comparatively small expenditure upon a new dam, 125,600 (one hundred and twenty-live thousand spindles with looms in proportion can be driven by this water power. Capital for the erection of additional mills and utilization of the immense power now wasted, is, all that is needed to make this property the site of a prosperous and populous manufacturing village. The personal inspection of capitalists is invited. Full and satisfactory details will be furnished on application, ded in the left arm last Hollingworth, a young railr's wounds while extremely se-

on on Loyd street near Ivy g to the counter, asked for a ky. There were two men with th, and the man behind the bar three orders when Hol-called for the liqliq.

rth called for the liqhe asked for a glass awith it and when the man behind the create the glasses and whisky bottle on counter he poured out a glass of sods, lingsworth and his associates talked hile after ordering the drinks and when they turned facing the bar to drink the foam had left the glass of sods, and in leaving left the glass only half full. This attracted Hollingsworth is an intion, and with an oath he asked the man hy he did not fill the glass. The man began filling the glass with soda again, and as he did so told Hollingsworth that he had filled it once. This made Hollingsworth mad and he began to swear roughly. Mr. O'Connor was sitting behind the counter and when Hollingsworth began to swear he arose and ordered him to desist or leave the place. This provoked a quarrel between the men, and finally Hollingsworth threw a glass at Mr. O'Connor. The glass missed the mark and then the proprietor of the saloon walked from behind the counter and taking a grip upon Hollingsworth bid not relish this treatment and jerking out his knife he buried it in Mr. O'Connor's left arm near the shoulder and with a jerk brought it out near the clow. The blood followed the cut like a flash of lightning, and in a second the injured man's clothing was dyed red with it. His arm dropped to his side useless, and knowing that he was badly hurt, Mr. O'Connor went back into the saloon and told a boy to go for a physician. Drs. O'Brien and King were called in and in an instant they discovered that the man had been seriously cut. The flesh was laid open to the bone and the blood was running in a stream. The trained eyes of the physicians told them that an artery had been cut, and at once a search was made for the severed vessel. The task was a difficult one and it required some time to take up the ends and to step the flow of blood. I u-in g this time the injured man'was growing weaker and weaker from the loss. Finally the

I u-ing this time the injured man,was growing weaker and weaker from the loss. Finally the flow was stopped, and Mr. O'Connor was taken to his home.

Hollingsworth stepped from the saloon immediately after doing the cutting, into the arms of Patrolmen McWilliams and Loony, and was conducted to the city prison, where he was booked. He asserts that he did the cutting in self-defense. The intelligence of the sfiray flew fast, and created quite an excitement. In the neighborhood of the saloon police were required to keep the pavements clear.

Working the Sheppard Murder. The remains of Sheppard, the negro mer-chant who was murdered Toesday night in his store on Fort street, were laid to rest yes-terday. The murder continues to be a most profound mystery and nothing has been ascerprofound mystery and nothing has been ascertained yet indicating the guilty party. Yesterday Chief Connolly detailed two of the best members of his detective corps to investigate the mystery. The men went to work on the case with a will and made some progess yesterday but just what that progress is has not been made known. It is generally understood, however, that the detectives are satisfied that the murder was not done for the sake of money as Sheppard's money had not been disturbed. One of the detectives engaged in the case left the city last night and will be absent several days but where he has gone no one knows, neither is the object of his trip known except that it is in the inof his trip known except that it is in the interest of the case in hand.

He was Assessed Fifteen and Cost. Dick Sasseen, the negro man who gave his wife such an unmerciful beating night before last and then ran into a pond of water to escape the officers, was arraigned in police court yesterday morning. Patrolman Carlyle, who waded into the water for the darky took the nitiatory steps in the prosecution, and when he had told his story Judge Anderson fined Sasseen fifteen dollars and cost.

Small Events Quickly Told. Oscar Bone was arrested yesterday by Captain Moon. Bone is suspected of having had a hand in a recent burglary.

Lizzie Jones, charged with stealing seven dollars from Berry Farmer, was arrested yes-terday by Captain Crim.

Charley Howard, charged with larceny, was arrested last night.

After a Well Known Citizen for a Murder in Philadelphia. In 1882 Michael Grimbs was riddled with bullets in a Samson street, Philadelphia, live by one John Monaghan.

A grass-covered mound in Cathedral cometery, Philadelphia, marks the supposed resting place of the murderer.

The Philadelphia Press, in making of the affair, which was revived by the Atlanta's detectives writing to the chief of police of detectives writing to the chief police of that city that Monaghan was here, says:

Monaghan's crime consisted of the fatal shooting of Michael Grimbs, 24 years, in the disreputable dance house of the former, "the Oxford." Sansom street, above Ninth, on the night of October 20, 1882. There was the usual gathering of both saxes in the place on that night, and wines, liquors and beer flowed freely. About midnight Grimbs entered the salcon, and after taking a drink with Monaghan, was escorted to the frame annex, where several intoxicated couples were waltzing. Grimbs selected a partiner and JOINED THE WALTERS.

He collided with others, and Monaghan told him that he must be more careful or leave the floor. Grimbs took a seat and entered into a heated discussion with the proprietor, until the latter went to the barroom, followed by the other. There the quarrel was resumed, and Monaghan went behind the bar and secured a revolver, which he pointed at Grimbs. The latter stood near the door, and, applying a foul epithet to the proprietor, defied him to shoot. Monaghan pressed the trigger and his victim foltred to! the street, where he fell. Monaghan collowed him and was about to shoot again when Grimbs said: "Don't fire! I'm shot now." The assailant returned to the salcon and then made his escape in a hack. Grimbs was taken to the Pennsylvania hospital where he died. Monaghan came of a family with a bloody record, and was the principal in a number of murderous assaults with kinfe and revolver. His influence as a democratic politician saved him from imprisonment.

When Captain Couch, of this city, issued when Captain Couch, of this city, issued When Captain Couch, of this city, issued his pocket companion, giving a list of murderers, escaped convicts and others wanted, this man John Monaghan's name appeared. One of Atlanta's detectives took up an idea that John Monaghan, who has been connected with the courthouse for years, was the man WANTED FOR THE MURDER, and wrote the following letter to the chief of police at Philadalphia.

and wrote the following letter to the chief of police at Philadelphia:

"I see you have offered a reward of $100 for one John Monaghan. Do you still want him? If so, come down and I will put you where you can get him in a short time. Don't let on how you got him if you come. I know where he is."

Yesterday, after reading the article, a Constitution man called to see Mr. Monaghan at the courthouse. He found the gentleman quietly enjoying a cigar in the sheriff's office. "See you are wanted for murder?" said the reporter.

"Yes, yes. Guess I must be the man," was reporter.

"Yes, yes. Guess I must be the man," was the reply.

"Ever live in Philadelphia?"

"No."

"How long since you were out of Atlanta for any length of time?"

"Fifteen or twenty years. For ten years past I have not been further than Rome, Ga., and then only a short trip."

"Then you don't think you are the man?"

"Not this evening. The shrewd Atlanta detective who has me spotted as the man could find more lucrative business. I suppose some of them did it. Why, these so-called Atlanta detectives haven't got as much sense about such things as a last year's wasp nest. I am willing to show up records with any of them."

Mr. Monaghan seemed worried about only one thing, and that was the fact that some men were foolish enough to believe that he is the right man.

the right man. stion Meets and Hears Reports of Comstiess—Business Transacted—Election of Offi-cers — Mr. Clarence Knowles Again Made President—He Accepts, Etc.

The Southwestern Tariff association held its third annual session yesterday in the Kimball-ball room. The attendance was much larger than on either of the preceding days, and the galleries were crowded with ladies. Several new companies were enrolled.

The question of an official journal for the association was discussed for come time, but no definite conclusion was reached. The compact between Savannah and Atlanta, as reported by the committee, was adopted. Messra. Stewart, Lee and Purcell were named as a committee to consider the insurance of ail wells. The report of the committee on wells. The report of the committee on the constitution and by-laws was taken from the table and discussed. The North Carolina troubles were again discussed, but the convention was unable to arrive at a conclusion, and the matter was referred to the executive committee with power to act. The rate on rolling mills in Birmingham was religiously to the control of the ed to 11 per cent. duced to 1½ per cent.

During the afternoon session the election of officers for the ensuing year was taken up.

Mr. Clarence Knowles, who has been president

Mr. Clarence Knowles, who has been president of the association since it started, had positively declined to be a candidate for re-election. The association, however, was called to order before the hour for meeting, and Mr. Knowles being absent, Vice President Deane took the chair. Immediately after the association had been called to order, Mr. J. C. Whitner, of Atlanta, arose and said:

Mr. President: Great duties need no introduction.

Mr. President: Great duties need no introduction, and so J will come to the performance of what is a great pleasure, one that has been in my heart all the while, and that is to propose for unanimous reelection to the office of president the name of Mr. Clarence Knowles. [Applause,] Mr. President, from that demonstration you are satisfied, and so are we all, that no further words are needed from me. I propose an immediate election. Major Livingston Mims arose and said:

are we all, that no further words are needed from me. I propose an immediate election.

Major Livingston Mims arose and said:

I am not content to let the occasion pass without saying a word and more than merely remarking. "Them's my sentiments." While the person is absent we can say many things without restraint and without disguise. It is well known the success of this association is due in very great neasure to his ability, to his great self-guidance and the admirable quality that he possesses of uniting all the members in harmonious action and feeling.

In view of these facts, the association fears a serious mistake might be made by electing a new man at this time who, perhaps, could not bring to the discharge of the duties of president great experience and the exercise of these qualities for which he has had such merited praise, It occurs to me that he is the man above all others just on this occasion and at this time who will "fill the bill." Everybody knows very well. Mr. Chairman, that he will say determinedly that he will resign and will not submit to re-election; the duties are severe, and that we are asking too much of him. But I believe this overpowering expression, this demonstration of the association will make demands upon him for his services at a time when perhaps the very life of the association will a depend on it. We all feel proud of its success thus far. It is indeed an association that all should glory in. I believe he will forget his own interests and serve us another term. I do not believe he will find it in his heart to persist in refusing to allow himself to be elected president of this association at this time, and whether or not, we have it in our own power to elect him, whether he will or not, in his determined position as to the nomination. I propose that he shall be elected by the unanimous standing yote of this association, and on this occasion, and that the secretary be directed, according to the forms of our constitution, to cast the entire ballot of the association for him. I

"Then I appoint," said Vice President Deane, Messrs. "Mims, Whitner and Patillo to notify Mr. Knowles of his r-eelection and in-

A round of deafening applause greeted the result of the vote and appointment of the com-Mr. Mims and committee found Mr. Knowles

"Gentlemen of the convention: I have the hap-"Gentlemen of the convention: I have the happiness to present to you the president-elect of the Southeastern Tariff association. [Applause.] I am sure, by every individual member of the association, his own friends repeatedly, again and again, I persuaded him most earnestly and he was still disposed to desist, until I assured him that it was the unanimous voice of the convention so happly expressed in his absence that none other would serve at the time, and in addition to his sacrifices of the past we had to beg and implore him that he would again make sacrifice of himself in the discharge of these arduous duties, never so important to us and this association, and thus he reluctantly consented.

Mr. Knowles took the chair and said:

"Gentlemen of the association, as a distinguished fellow citizen of mine would say, this spontaneous outburst is more than I can resist. I beg to assure you now that this honor was not only unsought but undesired. From the bottom of my, heart I desired to get rid of the duties and cares of this office, to which I felt I had devoted sufficient time and attention. However, as it is your unanimous desire that the duties of the office shall be continued by me, I beg to assure you that I will give to it in the future, as I have in the past, my very best efforts." [Applause.]

Mr. Thomas Peters, whose efficient work as secretary, induced President Knowles to pay him a high compliment, and the association to vote him thanks was placed in nomination.

Mr. C. C. Fleming, of New York, was also nominated. Mr. Knowles took the chair and said:

nominated.

When the vote was counted it was found that Mr. Fleming had been elected.

When the association adjourned at noon Mr. Stockdell, the senior member of the aldermanic board, invited the association to witness the workings of the Atlanta fire department. The majority of those present accepted the invitation and accompanied Mr. Stockdell to the unction of Peachtree and Broad street, where unction of Peachtree and Broad street, where he sent in a fire alarm. In less than a minute after the bell had tapped the box, Chief Joyner and his red wagon dashed up to the box. Mr. Stockdell hurriedly explained the cause of the alarm, and when the hook and ladder truck came up the chief informed the men that the fire was in the top of the Powell building. In an instant the men were at work, and as quick an instant the men were at work, and as quick as a flash the extension ladder was up and a man with a line of hose in hand was on the top round. The other companies were on hand in a gifty. The insurance men were much pleased with the work.

THE BANQUET.

The resident underwriters of Atlanta tendered a banquet complimentary to the Southeastern Tariff association last evening, at the eastern Tariff association last evening, at the Kimball house.

Such a banquet was never before seen in Atlants. It was indeed a grand affair, and reflected credit both upon Atlants's insurance men and Messrs. Beermann & Scoville, of the Kimball house.

Wurm's splendid orchestra discoursed sweet music from the second arcade, from six to seven o'clock. The insurance men and invited guests spent the hour most delightfully in social conversation. At seven o'clock promptly the gentlemen entered the banquet hall, and were soon seated around the festive board.

The tables were exquisitely decorated with flowers and pyramids, and were so placed as to form the letter T, supposed to stand for temperance or something else. The menu cards were the prettiest and most costly ever seen in the city, and were carried home by the guests as souvenirs of the happy occasion.

THE TOASTS AND RESPONSES.

THE TOASTS AND RESPONSES.

In his pleasant manner Major Mims arose and said that he wished every one to fill his glass and drink of the sparkling champagne to the coming of the Southeastern Tariff association to Atlanta. He said that it was always pleasant to be thrown into agreeable society. Atlanta's insurance men had given their brothers a hand-clasp of welcome, and were more than glad to welcome them around the festive board. Let the worry of adjustments be forgotten. Major Mims was applauded to the echo, and when quiet was restored he announced as the first toast, "Our Guesta," which was responded to by Mr. Gardner in a neat manner.

"The Southeastern Tariff Association." Response by Mr. Clarence Knowles. He reviewed the work of the association and spoke of its objects and purposes. Frequent applause interrupted him.

Mr. Knowles scarcely knew what to say, and as he looked upon the present from these with whom he is associated, he managed to speak a few words. He said he would prize the gift as coming from gentlemen who had honored him with the highest office in their gift, and that he would remember the 20th day of May, 1886, as one of the happiest in his

How a Man Invested His Last Dollar and Luck never deserts some people.

Yesterday afternoon a young man, a stranger in the city, walked into the Bonanza baseball pool rooms, and stepping up to the counter threw three bright silver dollars down. "There," said he, as he glanced up at the board

"that's the last dollar I've got in the world, and I'm out o' work."
"Then put the money in your pocket," said Dolph Kempner, who was attending the pool

"Then pick 'em out! pick 'em out!" said

"Then pick 'em out!" said Kempner.

"Well, let's see. Here are three dollars. They will buy three tickets. That's two threes. See? Now, if I buy No. 3 I'll have three threes. But No. 3 there ain't good, because chattanooga must beat Augusta to make it good, and Chattanooga can't do that. And Charleston, the pudding must beat Nashville, the self-styled winners, and Memphis—Oh. well, I'll risk it. Give me three threes,!"

"Suppose you take one three and divide the other between your two pockets," said Kempner, as he felt for the man who was buying on a weak combination."

'All right, cash me three tickets," he said as he handed them in.

The cashier counted out seventy-two dollars and fifteen cents and handed it out to the man, and as he walked awey, Kempner said:

"I picked 'em for him. See my luck."

The Drummer's Meeting.

Mr. Lew Hutzler, who has taken auch anactive interest in the organization of the Georgia division of the Travelers' Protective, association of the United States, has been very busy since Monday answering letters of inquiry from commercial travelers and receiving applications for membership. The indications are that a large number of traveling men from every section of the state will attend the meeting to be held tomorrow afternoon at 4 o'clock at the chamber of commerce, and that every business centre in the state will be fully represented. The wholesale houses in Atlanta recognize the utility of the movement and are presented. The wholesale houses in Atlanta recognize the utility of the movement and are indorsing it. The Georgia division, when it organizes to-morrow, will elect a delegation to represent the state at the annual convention of the Travelers' Protective association of the United States, which meets in Baltimere on June 24th part.

brilliant fielding and hitting by the Atlantas was witnessed—while on the part of the Macon club, there was but little hitting done, though the fielding was very fine, except that of Decker in the right field, who played very poorly. The Macon club hit the ball very hard, but seemed to knock it directly in the hands of some Atlanta man. Conway and Mappes, the Atlanta battery did most excellent work. Cline and Lyons, as usual, got in three-hargers; while Purcell was unvilling to in three-baggers; while Purcell was unwilling to be satisfied with anything short of a home run, and he made it. The coaching of the Atlanta team was all that could be desired. The audience was much pleased with the base running of the Macon team. Chamberlin, the new pitcher of the Macon team, was hit very hard, while Conway, of the Atlantas, had only four hits against him. Following is the official score

MEMPHIS, Tenn., May 20.-[Special.]memphis defeated the champion Savannah club today by the score of 3 to 2. The attendance was the largest ever congregated on a Memphis baseball ground, and numbered over 2,500 people. The grand stand was too small for the immense throng and many ladies were compelled to occupy impro-vised seats in the field. But two hits were made off of Knouff, while Nolan was batted fairly well. The two runs credited to Savannah were made on wild throws of Broughton to second, and were the only errors made by Memphis. There is great re-joicing here tonight, and Memphis stock is looking up. The boys are playing great ball and have the

CHATTANOOGA, Tenn., May 20.-[Special.]-The game today was won by the Chattanoogas by heavy batting and fine fielding. Smith, the new pitcher of the locals, occupied the box, and the visitors could do nothing with him. There should have been only two hits. In the sixth two men were t, and Reardon made a scratch to short, and ckerson and Cross each waited for the other to get it, and it went by before either could have gotten it. After that two of the five hits were made. Chattanooga got on to Reardon in the first inning, getting two hits together. In the second they paralyzed him, getting five hits, two of which were two baggers, and which, together with an error of Kappel and Suck, netted five runs, four of which were earned. In the seventh, two hits and a bad throw of Reardon to first yielded two runs. Young umpired the game faultlessly, and gave

The first of the Charleston-Nashville games was witnessed by over 1,000 speciators, largely ladies. Weyhing and Hines were the Charleston battery, Baker and Schellhasse the Nashville. Baker was unmercifully pounded, but was well supported. Charleston won by a score of 3 to 2. In the fifth, Brosnan, for Charleston, led off with the longest hit ever made on the grounds, the ball going to the extreme center field. He made but three bases, however, and was afterward caught between bases. The official score is as follows:

have been a victim to CATARRH-three. fourths of the time a sufferer from EXCRUCIAT-ING PAINS ACROSS MY FOREHEAD and MY NOSTRILS. The discharges were so oftensive that I hesitate to mention it, except for the good it may do some other sufferer. I have spent a young fortune from my hard earnings during my forty years of suffering to obtain relief from the doctors, I have tried patent medicines-every one I could learn offrom the four corners of the earth, with no relief. And AT LAST (57 years of age) have met with a remedy that has cured me entirely-made me a new man. I weighed 128 pounds and now weigh 146. I used thirteen bottles of the medicine, and the only regret I have is that being in the humble walks of life, I may not have influence to prevail on all catarrh sufferers to use what has cured me-GUINN'S PIONEER BLOOD RENEWER.
